DEATH WON RACE.

How Edward Childs of Jersey Shore Lost His Life Monday.

WAS BITTEN BY RATTLESNAKE

Brother of Mrs. M. E. Lilley of Towanda, Succumbs to Poison Injected in His Veins by Deadly Serpent—His Son Had Narrow Escape.

Tuesday's Williamsport Sun gives the following particulars of the death of Edward I. Childs of Jersey Shore, a brother of Mrs. Mial E. Lilley of Towanda, who died Monday of this week as the result of being bitten by a rattlesnake:

"Edward I. Childs, aged 41 years, died at his home in Dennison's Hollow, a mile above Jersey Shore at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, from the effects of a rattlesnake bite. He was bitten by the reptile Sunday afternoon near the home of his father, J. W. Childs, residing five miles from Cedar Run, Lycoming county. The case is especially sad, and has in it much of the human interest color.

Thought of His Children.

"Mr. Childs, accompanied by his 12 years old son, Blaine, had gone to Cedar Run on Friday for the purpose of helping his father on Saturday, get in his grain. Sunday afternoon Mr. Childs suggested to his father that he and Blaine would go out into the woods and pick some huckleberries to take home that evening to the children, of whom there are six, all younger than Blaine. He and the boy had gone about a mile from the farm house, and were traversing a path through a side hill thicket when Mr. Childs, who was ahead, heard the low buzz of a rattler and the next instant he experienced a twinge of pain above the right ankle. He jumped and called to the boy to do likewise, but the boy missed being struck by the snake by only the margin of a few inches.

Pierced a Vein.

"The snake escaped into the bushes. Mr. Childs bound a handkerchief about his leg above the wound and walked back to his father's house. By the time he had reached there, however, his leg had begun to swell and he experienced great pain. The kerchief had on it a plentiful showing of blood, indicating that the reptile's fangs had pierced a vein. Home remedies were applied, but no relief obtained. Then loading him into a wagon an almost break-neck trip to Slate Run, ten miles away, the nearest point at which a doctor resides, was begun. The distance was covered in a little better than an hour over roads that usually make the journey a two-hour trip. The services of Dr. Longwell were secured, and that night Mr. Childs remained at the Slate Run hotel. Monday afternoon he was brought home on the Fall Brook train. His condition was such when they reached home with him that he was unable to speak, and he was in a condition of utter collapse. Dr. Seeley was sent for, but he found the man beyond help. Death ensued in about an hour after he reached home.

Had Weak Heart.

"Though the leg upon which the snake's bite was inflicted was swollen and discolored, yet the swelling was not acute. The doctors think that a naturally weak heart was the real cause of the bite's fatal termination. Beside his widow and seven children, Mr. Childs is survived by his father and the following sisters: Mrs. George D. Miller and Mrs. Benjamin Harding of Waverly, and Mrs. Mial E. Lilley of Towanda. Mr Childs, up to two years ago, was a resident of Cedar Run. He was a robust man, and aside from a weak heart hardly knew what it was to feel ill."

Picnicked at Stevens Grove.

The following young people from Rome, spent yesterday picnicking at Stevens grove: Fritz Cannon, Bertha Buttles, Margy Study, Margy Moody, Reginald Tyrrell, Walter Forbes, Jack Whitney, Thomas Gleason, the Misses Whitney, Carrie Snyder, May Whitney, Irene McGovern, Fred Bartlett, Nina Allis, Edna Dyer, Harold Keller and F. B. Wells. They had supper at the Kinney house in Wysox and spent the evening in dancing.

Geder Held to Court.

Arthur Geder, colored, was given a hearing before 'Squire Orcutt Monday on two serious charges, one for aggravated assault and and the other for carrying concealed weapons. After hearing the evidence the 'Squire held the defendant to the next term of court, and in default of $100 bail in each case, he was committed to jail. C. M. Culver, Esq., represented the commonwealth.

Out Door Meeting.

Rev. Youell will hold an out door service in the grove at Mountain Lake next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, instead of the usual service at the church. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

WARNING TO MERCHANTS.

Lookout for Irresponsible Solicitors Who Are Working in This State.

A. M. Howes of Erie, state secretary of the Retail Merchants' association of Pennsylvania, sends out the following warning to the merchants of the state:

"Irresponsible solicitors are at work in many sections of the state soliciting funds for the repeal of the mercantile tax law, and in many cases allege that they are working in the interest of the Retail Merchants' association. Thousands of dollars have already been collected in this state by 'specialist associations' for the purpose of bringing about the possible repeal of the mercantile tax law. In view of the small individual contribution and the popularity of the cause of the repeal this fact causes no surprise. However, there is one point that should be noted, that in event of the repeal of the mercantile tax law there is a strong probability that another tax law will be substituted and to prevent such an enactment these 'specialist organizations' seem to offer no assistance. As the result of the influence brought upon, and the favorable sentiment created with the members of the last legislature by the Retail Merchants' association of Pennsylvania, there is some assurance of the repeal of this unnecessary tax. There is, however, always the danger of the passage of some other form to take the place of the one repealed. Taxation seems imperative to the law creators.

"The Retail Merchants' association of Pennsylvania has 148 affiliated associations, covering nearly all of the leading cities and towns of the state, and their individual membership runs into many thousands.

"No person is authorized to solicit legislative funds in our name, and all merchants are warned not to contribute unless they have money to burn."

Luthers Mills High School.

This year the course of study in the Luthers Mills high school will be especially designed for those wishing to enter a normal school. Only such subjects as are required in the regular course at Mansfield will be included in the curiculum, hence the most thorough and efficient preparation obtainable can be secured at this school. Of course, the other aims of the school will not be overlooked, but the primary purpose will be to fit the students to do the most creditable work in a Pennsylvania normal school. Those wishing further information concerning the school, are requested to see personally or to write the principal, Everitt E. Morley, Burlington.

Sunday School Excursion.

The Methodist, Presbyterian and Universalist Sunday schools have made arrangements to run an excursion to Ellenton on the S. and N. Y., on Wednesday, July 29. Ellenton is a very pretty spot on the summit of the S. & N. Y., and an ideal place for picnicking. There is plenty of shade, good ball ground, and other recreation accommodations. The distance from Towanda is 30 miles, and the rate on the excursion train will be 30 and 60 cents. The train will leave Towanda at 8:30 a. m., returning will leave Ellenton at about 5 p. m.

Rattlesnake Came to Life.

George VanDemark on Monday killed a large rattlesnake in the woods just East of Hallstead, Susquehanna county, and took it to town in a meal sack for exhibition. While in the act of taking him out of the bag to put it into a box, in the presence of a large crowd on Main street, the snake made a dash at Mr. Hand, one of the bystanders. It sank its fangs in Mr. Hand's trousers narrowly escaping biting him.

The Woman's Protective League of America held its first annual meeting at the same time as the national convention and Mrs. Norrish was honored by election to the office of treasurer of the league. The president is from Decatur, Ill., and the secretary of the organization from Springfield, Ohio.

NO TRACE OF ROBBER

Man Who Held Up Station Agent Stethers Still at Large.

MANY SUSPECTS ARRESTED.

Lehigh Detectives Are Still Hopeful of Rounding Up the Desperado Who on Monday Morning Emulated the Famous James Boys.

The bold desperado who surprised and held up Lehigh Station Agent Stethers at the upper station Monday morning, getting away with about $65 is still at large, and up to a late hour last night, no definite trace of him had been found. Lehigh Detective Shaffer is working on the case and is still hopeful of rounding up the gent who in the early hours of Monday morning emulated the daring James Boys of other days.

No less than 15 suspects were taken into custody Monday, but none of them could be identified by Floyd T. Stethers, the victim of the holdup. Ten of the suspects who were taken from Lehigh trains were arraigned before 'Squire Orcutt and the charge of illegal train riding was preferred against them. The 'Squire sentenced each to ten days in the county jail.

Story of the Hold-Up.

The holding up of Station Agent Stethers and the rifling of the money drawer in the upper Lehigh station, was about the most daring piece of work to be recorded in Bradford county criminology in many years.

Agent Stethers was alone at the time, and in the first place, was completely taken unawares by the robber. Train No. 5, Westbound, had gone, and No. 2, Eastbound, had not yet reached East Towanda when Agent Stethers had finished his work on the platform and had returned to the office, locking himself in. He sat down to the telegraph key to report No. 2 to the train dispatcher at Sayre, and had pressed the key but once, when he was startled by a gruff voice which commanded him to open the door and do it quickly.

Day was just breaking, it being about 3:20, and as a train was being made up near the round house, Agent Stethers thought the voice came from one of the trainmen who had come to the depot. On looking toward the window which is used by trainmen in registering, Mr. Stethers was surprised and alarmed to see a man with a faded red handkerchief over the lower part of his face covering him with a revolver.

He hesitated, and again the voice commanded with a curse that he open the door or be shot dead. Then Mr. Stethers, under cover of the pistol, opened the door and the highwayman sprang inside the ticket office, pressing the revolver against his side, and cursing the helpless station agent, threatening to kill him if he made a sound or refused to do as told.

Made to Lie on the Floor.

The robber shoved Stethers to the money drawer, and pressing the pistol against his cheek, commanded him to open it. Mr. Stethers pressed the combination, the bell rang, but the drawer did not open, and this angered the robber who pressed the revolver harder against his cheek and said: "You open that draw, and no fooling. I am here for the money and will have it or kill you."

Then the agent pressed the right keys in the combination and the drawer opened. With the money in sight, the rober commanded the station agent to lie down on the floor. Mr. Stethers started to walk to the other side of the office to lie down, but the robber halted him with a curse and made him lie down at his feet with his back to him. While he was down on the floor, Mr. Stethers thought that he could see someone outside the front window on the platform, and he raised up to get a better look, when the robber struck him and told him to keep down.

Could Not Open Safe.

After taking all the money from the drawer, amounting to about $65, the robber turned his attention to the safe and commanded the agent to open it, but Mr. Stethers told him he did not have the combination, that he had never opened it, and could not as he did not know how. Then the robber asked him if he had any money or valuables in his pockets, and was told that he did not. The robber was about to commence searching him, when he heard a noise in the direction of the roundhouse which sounded as if someone had struck the firebox of a locomotive while shoveling coal. He listened a moment, then evidently becoming frightened turned to go. He told the agent to stay on the floor for five minutes and if he did not he would shoot him, then he left and hurried away. The robber was no sooner out of the ticket office than Mr. Stethers was on his feet, and a moment later had turned off all the lights, and the next instant was telegraphing to Sayre, after which he phoned to Chief Miller.

The chief hurried to the depot, but could find no trace of the robber other than that he had gone Northward. John McClure and William Brennan, members of the train crew which was at work a short distance above the roundhouse, saw the robber come from the depot and hurry up the tracks. McClure and Brennan were standing some distance apart, and the robber went between them. Seeing he was a stranger, McClure said "where are you going," but the man made no reply, instead started and ran across the tracks and up toward Ulster.

The Lehigh officers at Sayre were notified, and immediately commenced working toward Towanda. They found a number of tramps but none answered the description. Mr. Stethers says he will know the man if he ever sees him again, for he has eyes of a peculiar brownish color, unlike the eyes of any person he ever saw before. He also remembers as to his size, and is sure he could identify him among a thousand.

No Novice.

By the manner and actions of the robber he was evidently no novice at the business. During the time he was in the ticket office he kept cursing, and calling the station agent vile names. When he ran up the track it was quite light, so light in fact that McClure and Brennan got a good look at him and they think they would also know him if they should see him again.

Suspects at Wysox.

About 10 o'clock Monday morning, The Review received word from Wysox that a man answering the description was loitering along the tracks, evidently waiting for a train. He was in company with another man who answered the description of the man who had been seen loitering about the upper depot Sunday night, and who was believed to be an accomplice of the robber. Detective Shaffer, Chief Miller, Detective Hollon and a number of deputies went to Wysox and made a thorough search of the woods and box cars between Towanda and Wysox, but failed to locate the suspects.

SOME PROHIBITIONS.

What Employes of the Postoffice Are Forbidden to Do.

The third assistant postmaster general has issued his orders in regard to what postmasters and persons in employ of the department at the postoffices may and may not do. Here are some of the things he says they must not do, but which in the past they have frequently been called upon to do:

Addressing registered letters of parcels.

Placing contents in envelopes and wrappers.

Sealing envelopes or wrappers.

Writing on envelopes or wrappers the name of the sender.

Free Library For Smithfield.

The use of the State Free Traveling libraries has been secured for Smithfield. They will be kept at the home of A. B. Riggs, Miss Mabel Riggs acting as librarian. These libraries consist of fifty volumes, exchangeable every six months, the use of the books being entirely free to all responsible persons over ten years of age who will sign the rules and promise to conform to them. The main expense is for transportation and it is hoped that readers will be willing to contribute ten cents a year. Three dollars will no doubt be sufficient to meet this and any other necessary running expenses. The library will be open on Tuesday and Saturday of each week from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m., beginning on July 21. All are cordially invited to call and examine the books and make full use of the library.

Camping at Kerricks.

One of the happiest parties that ever camped at Kerrick's camp is there at present for a two weeks' stay. The camp is an ideal place, beautifully situated in a fine grove, which affords ample shade. The party now camping there is part of the "Never Rest" Outing club of Plains, Luzerne county, and is composed of J. A. Seipe, Deputy Sheriff and the following young men: Will George, Charles Stewart, George Hanas, Juan Krause, Adam Smith and Thomas Morgan. The party is comfortably situated and are having a fine time.

May Be Wanted Man.

Detective John Rice, of the Lehigh Valley force, is wondering whether or not he picked up $2,000 in a box car at Coxton when he arrested Charles W. Harvey for illegal train riding. Harvey claims that he is a deserter from the regular army stationed at Fort May, Mich., and he answers the description of a man who deserted a year ago under the name of Charles W. Dixon and who shot and killed a sheriff who tried to capture him. If Harvey turns out to be the right man there is a reward of $2,000 for his arrest, hence the anxiety of the officer. —Scranton Tribune.

SAWYER WINS AGAIN.

MEANS MUCH FOR P. B. & E.

Francis A. Sawyer of Canton, former president of the Pittsburg, Binghamton & Eastern Railroad company, has scored another point. Yesterday, Dow, Jones & Co., of New York city, sent out the following information over their ticker service:

INTELLIGENT CANINE.

W. J. Ruggles' Dog Answers K. D. Westbrook's Advertisement.

W. J. Ruggles, of the firm of Rooker & Ruggles, dry goods merchants, has a very intelligent canine, and thereby hangs this tale of a dog, a bone and this advertisement:

"WANTED—A good long legged dog to bring in bones enough to support a small family."

The foregoing paragraph is from the advertisement now being run in another column of The Review by K. D. Westbrook, the well known merchant who does business in the Nobles block. When Mr. Westbrook inserted this paragraph in his ad, it was with the idea that it would tend to catch the eye of mortals, but he never dreamed that a dog would notice it. On Monday Mr. Westbrook was standing in front of his store talking to a customer when a fine looking dog with a large bone in his mouth trotted up, looked at Mr. Westbrook for a moment, then with a knowing wink, dropped the bone on the store step, wagged his tail as much as to say, "your'e welcome," and trotted away.

Upon inquiry Mr. Westbrook learned that the dog belongs to W. J. Ruggles, and now he is wondering if there are any real, live people who believe it does not pay to advertise in the Daily Review.

56,000 Graves Decorated.

Of interest to every member of the Grand Army of the Republic in this state are the Memorial day reports from G. A. R. posts in Pennsylvania, received by the Rev. Dr. John W. Sayres of Chester, who is department chaplain, which show that 56,000 graves of departed comrades were decorated on Memorial day. In the 1,730 cemeteries, 475 memorial addresses were made. There are 523 posts in the state but some of the addresses did not take place because the day was a rainy one. Last year there were 1,100 deaths in the Grand Army of the Republic in this state. There are 22,772 members of the Grand Army in good standing in Pennsylvania.

LaBauch of Ralston, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. F. Warner, pastor of the Sayre Methodist church in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The bride was for a long time clerk at the D. S. Andrus music store in Sayre, while the groom is a popular telegraph operator for the Lehigh at Ralston. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. LeBauch will reside in Ralston.

FISHERIES REPORT.

Commissioner Meehan and Warden Criswell Show Work in This Dept.

The reports of the Chief Commissioner of Fisheries W. E. Meehan and Chief Warden J. W. Criswell to the Board of Fishery Commission for the six months, ending May 31, 1908, are interesting documents.

Commissioner Meehan shows that the total output of fish for the six months was 655,311,407, or about the same as the entire output of 1907. These were distributed from the eight state hatcheries and consisted of brook, rainbow, brown and lake trout, gold fish, silver side salmon, white fish, lake herring, wall-eyed pike, yellow perch, pickerel, bullheads, blue pike and shad.

Chief Warden Criswell's report shows that in the six months preceding May 31, there were 248 arrests for violations of the fish laws and 225 convictions. Twenty-nine went to jail, 11 appealed. The amount of fines imposed upon convicted persons was $5,907, of which $4,117 was collected. Out of a total of 229 special wardens, only six were dismissed on various charges.

The chief warden declares that there has been a more widespread violation of the fish laws during the last six months than at any time in the same period since he has had anything to do with protection work. He attributes this to the large number of unemployed people who have been driven to violate the fish laws to secure food for their families and says that under these circumstances the men under his direction have shown as much leniency as possible. Viloations by dynamiting and netting are decreasing. He declares that the wardens report an increase in the number of game fish, particularly the small mouth bass and trout.

Altogether the reports contain much interesting matter and show that the authorities are doing an excellent service in the Department of Fisheries.

State College Will Have Exhibit.

S. Bergen Park, Esq., secretary of the Bradford County Agricultural society, is in receipt of a letter from the department of agriculture, stating that the State College would have an exhibit at the fair in Towanda during the last two days of September, and the first two of October. This exhibit will consist of everything which is grown or produced on the experimental farm at State College. The exhibit will require two cars to transport, and will take up a floor space 60x60 feet.

Will Raise Road.

It has been decided to raise the level of the state road at Canton on the North side of the main square about four inches. It is said the boro is threatened with a law suit in case the change is not made. The road as originally built was altogether too low and was most inconvenient to pedestrians in crossing the street and was quite a detriment to properties on that side of the street.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the past few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney, Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Happenings All Over the State in Condensed Form.

OFFERS TO ELECTROCUTE DOGS

Bloomsburg Electritian Offers to Put All Unmuzzled Canines Out of Business—Other Happenings in the Keystone State.

While walking in Frey's woods Saturday afternoon, George A. Willi of Middletown, noticed a peculiar-looking bird sitting on the stump of a tree. The bird made no effort to escape and Willi captured it after a slight struggle. The bird proved to be a rare specimen of the owl family and is known as the monkey face. The owl is apparently quite young, as it has not yet shed the down feathers on its back. This species of owl is seldom seen in this section. They grow to be quite large and are vicious. A full-grown one was captured some years ago by James Lehman on Hill Island. Mr. Willi has the owl at his home and it is attracting much attention. The rarity of the bird is causing many people to call and see it.

A Bloomsburg electrical firm has come forward with a proposition to electrocute all unmuzzled dogs that are caught, instead of having them shot.

Because foul balls broke windows in nearby houses, Judge Holt of Beaver county, has granted a permanent injunction against base ball games on the ball grounds at Rochester.

The pay roll in the mills, furnaces, coke plants and coal mines of the various companies clearing through Pittsburg banks was the largest on Saturday of any pay day since last October.

Lehigh county, which for many years has enjoyed the distinction of having the opening meeting of the Republican state campaign, is planning to have the initial meeting of both parties this year. The Democratic meeting is to be held on Aug. 29. The Republican meeting will be held probably in Pleasant Corner, in the upper end of the county, on Saturday, Sept. 5.

W. H. Budd of New Castle, who had just bought a new shot gun on Saturday, found that the breech worked hard and was in the act of examining what was wrong when the weapon was discharged and the entire charge struck his left ankle, splintering the bone so badly that amputation was necessary.

Henry Putnam of Hyner, Clinton county, is something of a snake fancier. He recently exhibited in Renovo a box of 20 live rattlesnakes of different sizes, which he had captured during the past two months.

H. Updegraff of Middletown, has raised a garden vegetable that is a curiosity. It is a sort of triple cucumber, three cucumbers having grown together into one vegetable. One of the most popular pastimes in the vicinity of Tyrone these hot Summer nights is that of frog hunting. Frog legs are rapidly becoming known as the most delicate meat obtainable, and the price per pair in the Tyrone market is about a dollar. During the past week many "frog hunters" have worked the lowlands in the vicinity of the scales, one party alone bringing home seven dozen of the greenbacks.

The huckleberry crop in the vicinity of Hazleton is said to be the best in five years. Record pickings are reported from all sections and the shipments are very heavy. One woman in Bunker Hill has gathered on an average of 50 quarts per day unassisted, while the Kuras family of Honey Brook, averaged 150 quarts a day. A Slavish woman with her two little daughters, of Theskow, have averaged 80 quarts daily. The greatest shpments are being made by Frank Cascarella of Bunker Hill.

The little doe which has been trying so persistently to get across the Susquehanna river to its old stamping ground in the mountains of Perry county may yet gain its freedom. For the past several days the footprints of the dainty creature have been seen along the river road at the foot of the Blue Mountain, and it is only the high wall extending around the narrows that keeps it from swimming for the other shore. When once it learns that the wall is only a mile long the doe will stay no more on hostile ground.

Seven Lock Haven men went to the mountains a few days ago to pick huckleberries. After being out awhile they heard a rustling in the thicket and on looking up were alarmed to see three bears busily engaged eating berries. The bears saw the men about the same moment and seemed to be frightened also, as they quickly wheeled about and ran away, greatly relieving the men of the fear of a possible tussle with them.

Fulton county is not only out of debt and without prisoners in the jail, but it has a snug cash balance in the hands of its treasurer. In addition it has among its assets, what few counties, perhaps, have, namely, a hay crop. As fine a lot of clover and timothy was harvested from the lot West of the court house at McConnellsburg as one could wish for. Adam Grissinger and Jacob Wilkinson cut it in the old-fashioned way and took it up in good condition.

The dictum of the doctor is not always to be relied on. Sinking eight times in Conodogunit creek on Tuesday morning, David C. Byers, aged 22, of Harrisburg, was pulled out by Charles Sturgeson, who, though a cripple, plunged in after the drowning man. A physician pronounced Byers dead, saying no one could live after going under more than three times. After the doctor left, Sturgeson and several companions worked over Byers and restored him to life.

Jacob F. Hershey, who resides near Mt. Joy, is one of the most extensive bee-keepers in Lancaster county. He has been in the business for more than half a century and now has 120 hives from which he obtained 4,100 pounds of honey. He has adopted a scheme whereby he uses a hive of bees as scavengers to keep his immense amount of honey from cobwebs, ants, etc. Why these bees don't steal their own honey is his secret. He recently erected a spacious room in which to store his honey.

On the farm of L. B. Huber, near Landis Valley, Lancaster county, is a pear tree of the Kieffer variety, which, in addition to giving promise of yielding a big crop of fruit, yielded a fine lot of fancy comb honey, a crop not usually found on pear trees. Last Spring Mr. Huber, who is an enthusiastic tree culturist, fitted a hive in the pear tree for any stray bees that might be out looking for a home. The result was a nearly swarm selected the hive in the tree for its home. Mr. Huber took 30 pounds of comb honey from the tree, leaving enough there for the bees' Winter store.

Her bereaved husband formerly resided in Towanda, where he is well known.

Mrs. E. A. Gernant.

Anna Unger, wife of the Reverend Edwin A. Gernant, rector of Christ Church, Towanda, died Wednesday July 15, at the Robert A. Packer hospital, Sayre, where she had been taken the previous day. Although her friends were in a measure prepared for the announcement of her death by the serious illness which preceded it, yet it came to all of them as a terrible shock, for it was hard to realize that this buoyant, energetic and useful life, but so recently the animating spirit of the home, the church and the community, had passed forever to silence and to rest just as the happiest, sunniest hour of all life's voyage had been reached.

Mrs. Gernant's illness began about ten weeks ago and from that time until death supervened there was a gradual decline of strength accompanied by periods of great physical suffering. On Monday of last week she was taken to the Packer hospital at Sayre, where she underwent an operation on Tuesday. Weakened by long illness she was unable to rally from the shock and on Wednesday morning she passed peacefully to rest.

Anna J. Unger, daughter of John F. Unger, was born at Rockport, near Pottsville, Pa., April 19, 1863, where she resided until her parents removed to Philadelphia six years later. She was married Sept. 26, 1882, to the Rev. Edwin A. Gernant and came to Towanda in May, 1900, when her husband was called to the rectorship of Christ Church. Of this union five children were born, two of whom, a daughter, Gertrude, and a son, Edwin, survive.

From the time of her advent among Towanda people, Mrs. Gernant has had an active and prominent place in the social life of the town. Possessing mental gifts of a high order and a personality that charmed all who came within its influence, she quickly won and easily retained the love and admiration of her friends and acquaintances. She always claimed the love and friendship of those of her own years and the kindly affection of the older circle of a large acquaintanceship. Her kindly, joyous, sunny disposition never lost the sweetness of girlish years and to all she was ever the embodiment of innocence and the incarnation of sincerity. Her religion was a part of her nature. It fitted her as a garment of spotless fold and breathed in act and word the emotion of sweet spirituality. In her home she was the central and reigning spirit and there she will be most missed. It is hard, indeed, to our finite senses to reconcile the providence of the removal from among us of this useful Christian life, this loved and loving wife, mother, friend, who died when womanhood's morning almost touches noon and when the shadows still were falling to the West. Her life, seemingly, was ended at a time when most needed by those dependent upon her, and if death ended all then would its close have been a tragedy, as sad and deep as can be woven of the warp and woof of mystery and death.

But it was in the church and its work that she was especially interested and in which she was a most efficient helper. There she gave her time, her strength, her counsel and her untiring devotion. To her husband and church work she was in the fullest sense a helpmeet. Her wise counsel was much sought and her ever ready and efficient assistance was a potent and a far reaching influence in and out of the church. To every duty she was faithful and to her friends and loved ones she ministered with willing hands, with loyal heart and with a devotion unsurpassable. Just before the end, when it became necessary to face the menace of the surgeon's knife, she met this grave crisis with the same calm courage and resignation that she had met every duty of life. No soldier ever died at his post of duty more nobly than did the brave spirit that on Wednesday morning passed from earth to life everlasting. Resting with confidence in the faith that had sustained her in all life's trials and vissitudes, with the name of the Cross upon her lips, she softly fell asleep, and when she awoke, it was, we may believe, to the knowledge of the meaning and the mystery of life. A beautiful life it was, crowned and perfected by a gloriously triumphant death.

When fell, today, the word that she had gone,
Not this my thought: Here a bright journey ends,
Here rests a soul unresting; here, at last,
Here ends that earnest strength, that generous life—
For all her life was giving. Rather this
I said (after the first swift, sorrowing pang):
Hence, on a new quest, starts an eager spirit—
No dread, no doubt, unhesitating forth
With asking eyes; pure as the bodiless souls
Whom poets vision near the central throne
Angelically ministrant to man;
So fares she forth with smilling, Godward face;
Nor should we grieve, but give eternal thanks—
Save that we mortal are, and needs must mourn.

Funeral of Mrs. Gernant.

The funeral services of Mrs. Gernant, wife of Rev. Edwin A. Gernant, rector of Christ Church, were held in the church Friday afternoon at 4:30. The Rev. H. L. Hannah of the Church of the Redeemer, Sayre, conducted the services, and was assisted by Rev. W. E. Daw of Trinity church, Athens, Rev. Frank Hardy of Louisville, Ky. The spacious church was well filled with neighbors, friends and townpeople, who came to pay their last tribute to one who was universally beloved in this community. The beautiful and comforting service of the Episcopal church for the burial of the dead was most impressively rendered, and Miss Sara Jennings sang with sympathetic expression "Dry Thy Tears." The hymns were "Oh Paradise," "Abide With Me" and "For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest." The bearers were Rodney A. Mercur, Esq., E. W. Elwell, M. M. Spalding, C. P. Welles, Benj. NEW CLEWS IN DREW MYSTERY

Brother Says Hazel Went Driving Night of Crime.

GIRL'S AUNT TO TELL ALL.

District Attorney Jarvis O'Brien Now Feels More Hopeful Than Ever About Outlook For Clearing Up "the Great Troy Mystery"—Joseph Drew Says Buggy Girl Rode In Was Returned to Stable Late at Night—Detailed Narrative of William Hoffey, Mountaineer, Who Saw Two Men on Bank of Pond Where Body Was Found.

Troy, N. Y., July 21.—Joseph Drew, brother of the murdered girl, Hazel Drew, has informed the authorities at work on "the great Troy mystery" that on Tuesday, July 7, a few hours before the murder, the pretty young governess went for a ride with a man who hired a buggy from one of the livery stables in Troy.

The buggy returned late at night. The man was alone in the vehicle.

District Attorney Jarvis O'Brien is more hopeful than ever before that he will succeed in unraveling the mystery. After a consultation between the coroner and the district attorney it was decided to hold the inquest the latter part of this week.

In addition to the story of Joseph Drew, O'Brien bases his hopes on two other developments in the case. One is the story told by the mountaineer. William Hoffey, of seeing two men near the spot where the body was found at Teal's pond. He saw them just before the maltreated body was discovered. His story, even as to the detailed description of the men's clothes, is corroborated by his wife who accompanied him.

The other development is important in that it consists of a suddenly announced willingness on the part of Miss Minnie Taylor, the girl's aunt, to tell all she knows about Hazel's past, her love affairs, her friends and her habits.

Miss Taylor's secrecy has proved a huge stumbling block to the authorities since the murder was revealed.

Miss Taylor now admits that Hazel knew well the railroad conductor, John E. Magner of New York city, who has been mentioned in the case and adds that the girl was very fond of him. "She loved him," says Miss Taylor.

Magner's Stories Differ.

Magner in several stories that the authorities declare differ materially denies he ever knew the girl. He does not explain how a card bearing his name and a postal signed "John E. Magner" came to be found among the effects of the dead girl.

A letter received by Hazel Drew from two young men is in the hands of the police. It shows she had secret acquaintances.

Hoffey's story, in which his wife agrees, is as follows:

"As I walked up the knoll to Teal's pond I was rather surprised to see a city-like buggy drawn in near the fence to my right so we could pass. The rig looked like a livery outfit. It was a single Concord buggy attached to a splendid, frothing bay horse with dark mane and tail. The animal was young.

"As I approached I had a chance to see the man in the buggy. He was slender and light haired. He seemed not more than twenty-five years old and clutched the reins tightly, like an inexperienced horseman. His elbows were resting on his knees. His head was turned toward the pond. He wore a light brown cap, a suit which was neither white nor black and a high collar with one of those bow ties.

"I ain't much on being frightened but I was somewhat chilled when I saw that fellow sitting there. Then my wife pointed over the pond, and I looked back over in the bushes at the other side of the water and saw another fellow in the shrubbery. He was bent over as if searching for something. His back was turned. He wore a checked shirt and dark trousers and a straw hat."

HIS WIFE TOO YOUNG.

Prominent Pennsylvania Educator Loses Good Position.

A news dispatch from West Chester under date of July 17, says:

"Because he married a 16 years old girl, one of his former pupils, Prof. Ira D. McCord, principal of the Chester Springs Soldiers' Orphan school, must resign.

"The principal, who was the author of the McCord bill in the last legislature, to select United States senators by popular vote, received a letter from the state school commission ordering him to resign. Any protest against this decree, he has been given to understand, will be futile.

"The trouble is that Prof. McCord in selecting his wife, did not pay sufficient attention to the state law covering such institutions as that of which he is the head. A feature of the law is that the wife of the principal must be considered as a member of the faculty, and should act in the capacity of matron of the school.

"Two weeks ago the principal married Miss Stella Jones of Bucks county. She had been one of the brightest pupils of the school, and is now only 16.

"The stand of this body is that, because of her youth, Mrs. McCord is not fitted to take up the burdens of matron."

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, ofttimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

LAST OF A PARTY.

In 1904, Thomas E. Watson, presidential candidate of the People's party, or Populists, polled 117,000 votes, discouraging decline from the 1,041,028 which went to James B. Weaver in 1892. Weaver had the advantage of a fusion, which in several States, gave him a large Democratic vote. In his year, too, neither of the principal parties offered an allurement for the extreme radicals of the West and South. To drop to the small vote of Watson was partly due to the return of old Democrats and Republicans to their former parties, and partly to the subsidence of interest in currency and kindred "reforms" which came with an era of prosperity.

Last week Mr. Watson accepted the Populist nomination in a characteristic speech, filled with references to Greek, Roman and modern history and eloquent with denunciation of the poor quality of government supplied by the United States.

What Mr. Watson represents in the present campaign is obsecure to the wisest political soothsayer. The rates of decline between 1892 and 1904 would point to a vote of insignificance in 1908. But Wharton Barker received but 50,373 votes in 1900. The ratio of increase between Barker and Watson would indicate something over 200,000 this year, a support almost equaling Mr. Swallow's Prohibition party vote in 1904. In any view it is safe to predict that the Georgia historian and statesman will not seriously affect the balance of power between the Republican and Democratic parties. His speech did not disclose a partiality of bitterness as between the two, though the Republican party, having had charge of national affairs for twelve years, presented more objects of Populist dislike and Watsonian rebuke. To the extent of his influence in the campaign Mr. Watson will help Bryan, though it may be that the discontented vote may take from Bryan most of the strength it gives to Watson. The election figures of November will place Watson little higher than he stood in 1904, and will show him at the head of a party that is hopeless and helpless.—Philadelphia Ledger.

TO REPUBLICANS.

Every now and then we meet a Republican who is not very much interested in the campaign just yet, and who declares that even if Bryan were chosen president next November he would be able to do no harm of any sort, since the federal senate will be strongly Republican for the next four years. Yet there are many considerations urging Republicans to spare no effort to secure the defeat of the Democratic nominee. For instance, one must not forget the supreme court of the United States. The chief justice is 75; several of his associates are considerably past 70. It is about as certain as anything earthly can be that the next president, whoever he may be, will appoint four or five members of the supreme court. It is very probable that a majority of those now on the bench will retire, either by death or resignation, before March 4, 1913. Republicans should run no risks.

MR. BRYAN AND HIS PROSPECTS.

For some time past the country has looked upon Mr. Bryan's nomination as inevitable and his confidence in his own nomination has been strong from the moment the delegates began to be selected. This has been shown by his attacks on obnoxious leaders in his party like Guffey of this state, McGraw of West Virginia, Parker of New York, and others. In the case of some of these men his attacks failed. His purpose to drive these men out of the party did not succeed. But all along he felt that the nomination was in his hands, and he was willing to trust to chance for the election.

With the materials at its disposal Denyer has, perhaps, made as good a choice as was possible. The radical element is, as in 1896 and 1900, in the preponderance in the Democratic party and Bryan was its first and only leader. Whatever can be done on radical lines Bryan can do. All the extremists, the faddists, the visionaries and the impracticables in the Democratic party have Bryan for their prophet. The conservative faction of the Democracy had its day four years ago, and it was beaten worse than the other element was beaten in either of the campaigns. Just before the election of 1904 Bryan announced that after the close of that campaign he would resume his radical propaganda, and he has kept his word. He foresaw Parker's defeat just as clearly as any of the Republicans did. And, even more confidently than the Republicans did, he forecast the program of extremism to which the Democracy would be forced to assent in the campaign of 1908. It is possible that Parker's defeat was a little more sweeping than Bryan looked for, but it is entirely safe to say that he did not mourn on that account. The overthrow of the old "safe and sane" faction of the Democracy was a vindication of Bryan's prophecy, and it was a notification to the country that the revolutionists and destructionists of 1896 and 1900 were again to give the law to the party.

Republicans will be free to concede, nevertheless, that Bryan is as strong a candidate as anybody would have been who has at any time been mentioned in connection with the nomination. Hundreds of thousands of Democrats will vote against him. Hundreds of thousands would have voted against Gray, Johnson, or anybody else whose name had been coupled with the candidacy. The more radical portions of the Bryan faction would have assailed any one of these as it assailed Parker in 1904. Bryan's Democratic enemies in the South and East have all along proclaimed that his nomination would doom their party to overwhelming and deserved defeat. Perhaps they were right. However, we believe no Democrat could carry the country this year. A survey of the field may reveal certain little obstructions in the path of the Republicans. These are the business stagnation, the hostility of some of the labor union chiefs, and the defection of the negroes. These obstacles are largely imaginary. Business is on the up grade, as shown by the opening of idle mills all over the country. The labor chiefs who are against us in 1908, were against us in 1896, 1900 and 1904, but they did not control the labor vote in those years and they will not control it now. Very few votes will be lost to the Republicans on account of the Brownsville blunder. Every sensible colored man knows that the Democratic party, dominated as it is by the Southern element, will grant no favors to him. If the Democratic campaign managers bring the Brownsville incident up they will anger the South, antagonize all the Southern born Democrats who reside in the North, and repel at least three white votes for every negro vote which they gain. The stars in their courses are fighting against the Democracy. The Republican party has the record, the leadership and the candidates that appeal to the country. It is only fair to say, however, that Bryan is likely to make a stronger fight than Parker made in 1904, and conceivably, he may make as lively a canvass as he himself did in 1896, although this is not likely. Republicans will see the necessity of rolling up the largest vote which can be mustered, so as to make the victory for Taft and Sherman certain and overwhelming.

LABOR DENYING MR. BRYAN.

As was to be expected, labor leaders representing intelligence and skill in the trades are hastening to inform Samuel Gompers and Mr. Bryan that organized workingmen cannot be delivered to the Democratic candidate against their political principles or against their judgment of what is best for themselves and their country. In our opinion it is idle to deny that the Nebraskan will be strongly supported by labor not in the higher ranks of proficiency and earning power, just as he was supported by that element in his campaigns of 1896 and 1900 without being elected or coming anywhere near election. But it remains to be proved that he will receive the votes of members of the skilled trades on the issue which he seeks to make of the injunction.

Advertising is the most necessary when times are hard. At such times the purchaser exercises more care in purchasing and considers longer before he parts with his cash. Therefore he needs more urging and the only way he can be urged before he thinks of making a purchase is through advertising. The advertiser who advertises extensively but judiciously during dull times is not only the first to benefit when the times get better, but he does more than any one else to get money in circulation, which means to bring about good times.

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Men frequently announce that hey have discovered the secret of longevity, and unselfishly share it with their fellow men. Usually one word covers the formula—abstemiousness. Abstain from this or that which you have always liked and you will surely reach a green or ripe age—whichever your prefer—old age. Unfortunately the discoverers always die before they have had full opportunity to prove that their plan is practical and valuable.

Wu Ting-Fang, the Chinese minister to this country, who claims that he has discovered the secret of longevity, may be only joking. He is a canny Chinaman and he likes a bit of fun occasionally. Mr. Wu calculates that a man may live two hundred years if he adopt and adhere to a proper system of diet. Mr. Wu does not eat breakfast, taking only two meals a day. Here he departs from the rules of longevity as laid down by other discoverers, who prefer four or five meals a day.

The Minister further says that at home he eats rice, but when he goes out to dinner, whole wheat bread; fresh vegetables, nuts and fruit; he avoids coffee, cocoa, tea, liquors, condiments and all rich foods; he doesn't eat salt because it "makes one's bones stiff;" he masticates thoroughly, doesn't drink at meals, practices deep breathing and takes moderate exercise. He has omitted an important item, important to occidentals. Worry kills more quickly than disease; or, rather, it opens the way for disease and death.

It may be suspected that Mr. Wu is having his little joke at the expense of his American friends, says The Harrisburg Independent. At any rate he will not likely live long enough to prove that his theory is correct.

JAIL FOR OLEO DEALER.

The Review's farmer readers will be interested in learning that for the first time since the passage of the law of 1901, forbidding the sale of colored oleo "a second conviction" sentence carrying a jailed penalty in additon to a fine was affirmed by the superior court, the opinion being handed down by Judge Morrison.

Michael McDermott of Charlerio, Washington county, was arrested last Fall for selling oleo colored with coal tar dye, and was tried on two charges, before Judge McIlvaine in November. He was convicted on both and moved an arrest of judgment. On February 11 he was arrested for a second defense, and was again tried before Judge McIlvaine, who in the meantime had dismissed the motion to arrest judgment, and was again convicted.

For the second offense he was fined $50 and sentenced to six months in jail, and on the two charges in the first offense he was sentenced to $200 fine for each, making a total sentence of $900 fine and six months in jail, approved by the supreme court.

This is the first "second offense" case brought to an issue in this state, though Food Commissioner Foust has instituted similar cases in Allegheny and other Western counties.

GOOD UNTIL USED IN NEW YORK.

A decision affecting all railroads in the state of New York was recently made by the court of appeals. Not only is it important to the railroads but to the traveling public as well. In effect, it is that the mileage books are good until they are exhausted and that they can be used by anyone as well as the actual purchaser. This is the first decision of its kind in that state, and as far as lawyers can find there is no such sweeping opinion by any court in the United States.

The decision is the outcome of the suit instituted by a woman who sought to recover damages for a technical assault for being ejected from a train. She had a mileage book, but it was claimed by the railroad that the book was made out in her husband's name.

The initials being similar, the book was offered by the plaintiff and refused by the company. The court of appeals reversed the decision of the lower courts and the case goes back to the lower court for new trial.

Every employee of the Bank of England is required to sign his name in a book on his arrival in the morning, and, if late, must give the reason therefore. The chief cause of tardiness is usually fog, and the first man to arrive writes "fog" opposite his name, and those who follow write ditto." the other day, however, the first late man gave as his reason, "wife had twins," and twenty other late men mechanically signed "ditto" underneath.—Success Magazine.

Most people will be surprised to hear that no sort of bird, beast or creeping thing will touch a castor-oil plant. It seems to be a rank poison to all the animal world. Even a goat will starve before biting off a leaf, and a horse will sniff at it and turn up his upper lip as though it had the most detestable odor on the face of the earth. Army worms and the locusts will pass it by, though they may eat every other green thing in sight, and there is no surer way to drive moles away from a lawn than to plant a few castor beans here and there. Even the tobacco worm will refuse to be fed on its leaves. There is hardly another instance in natural history of a plant being so universally detested in the animal world.

An automatic machine capable of threading 1,000 needles per minute is a mechanical marvel of a Swiss factory. The operation includes picking up the needle, propelling to the proper position, tying a knot, cutting the thread, and returning the needle to its assigned resting place.

HEARST IN THIS CAMPAIGN.

Mild interest in the approaching convention of Mr. Hearst's party awakens curiosity as to the fate of independent movements in presidential elections of the recent past. A glance at the figures does not warrant the hope that the Independent party will cut a very large figure in the ballot of 1908.

In the last twelve years the most votes given to any candidate for the presidency outside the Republican and Democratic tickets were polled by Eugene V. Debs, four years ago, 402,823. Four years earlier the Socialist candidate had received only 87,814. Within that period the next highest number of votes won away from the leading nominees was 258,536 for the Prohibition candidate, Swallows, in 1904.

In the first Bryan campaign the Populist ticket polled for him and Watson, who ran against Sewall for vice president, 245,728 ballots. In the following presidential campaign the Middle-of-the-road Populists could muster only 50,373 votes for their ticket. Tom Watson, who made an aggressive campaign against Roosevelt and Parker, managed to round up only 117,183.

When General Palmer ran against McKinley and Bryan in 1896 it was believed that the bolters from the Popocratic fusion would line up in large numbers for the National Democratic ticket. Yet the Palmer and Buckner electors received only 133,424 votes.

Evidently it is not easy to get Americans to throw away their votes in presidential contests. The experience of the Hearst party in local campaigns is not likely to be repeated in a national canvass wherein it is foreordained that the President elected will be one of the candidates on the Republican and Democratic tickets.

DEMOCRATIC DREAMS.

These are the days of the Democratic rainbow-chasers. Mr. Bryan is going to carry the entire Middle West, regardless of the overwhelming preponderance of the Republican votes in recent elections. The latest States that the boomers returning from Denver have placed in the Democratic column are Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana. Their reason in each instance is that the Republican party in these particular States is divided into two vigorous factions, each anxious for the honors of political control, but both earnest and united in their support of the national ticket.

Mr. Bryan, in looking to Iowa, expects the support of the Cummins faction, but Governor Cummins publicly declares that Iowa can be counted on for at least 75,000 Republican majority. In Wisconsin the situation is the same, Senator Lafollette and his followers being outspoken in their advocacy of the Republican ticket. Indiana has always been a comparatively close State, and it is generally admitted that on State issues particularly the Republicans are not in as good shape as might be desired, but there is nothing in the situation that would seem to imperil the national ticket. Hopefullness is the chief asset of the Democratic campaigners. Without this important quality they would never get their campaign under way. When it is necessary for the Bryanites to figure out Iowa as a doubtful State, however, their political prospects are more disimal than even the most ardent Republican had suspected.

KING CORN.

American corn is one of the wonders of the world. It is big in any way you look at it. In dollars it is worth double that of any other crop grown in any country on earth, says The Philadelphia Press.

The majesty of Uncle Sam's cornfield this year surpasses all understanding. If every foot of ground in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey were planted in one solid field it wouldn't match the one that is today being cultivated.

As becomes the giant crop of mother earth, corn surpasses all others in swiftness of growth. When farmers exultingly declare they can hear the corn grow, it is the literal truth. In ten weeks the stalks attain their full average height of about eight feet.

The 100,000,000 acres of waving green corn fields are today like a banner of hope. They promise abundance and more comfort to all the people of this fortunate land.

Nothing that comes out of the ground all around the world can rival in real grandeur American corn as it appears in mid-July—unless it be the mountains of yellow ears that will fill the granaries of Autumn.

The first six months of 1908 are remarkable for an enormous falling off in immigration. If there is no decided increase during the remaining six months the total for 1908 will not exceed 400,000. In addition to the falling off in immigrants thousands of former immigrants have returned to their native lands.

It has been figured out on pretty good authority that American tourists to Europe this year number about 15 per cent. less than usual, and that the most of those who have gone abroad are returning earlier than has been the custom. Well, there are reasons, says The Philadelphia Press. This country is itself a pretty good place to roam around in when anyone wishes to go away for a vacation, and the more Americans go about the better they appreciate that fact. Some people haven't as much money now as sometimes, and even the greater number of those who have gone abroad have shown this by less lavish expenditures than in most years. The early return home is accounted for by the fact that a business revival has already begun, and those with business interests want to be here to help it along.

DEATH RIDES BEHIND.

Pretty Hazel Drew and the shadowed depths of Teal's Pond, near Troy, have furnished this year the yearly Summer girl murder, says the Philadelphia Press.

Each year, as these months bring open air life, suburban resorts, excursions and the long ride, some week is fated to lay bare some girl's tragic end. As with Hazel Drew, she usually comes from a wage-earning home. She has looks, figure and energy. She has increased her wage, secured some place and work that bettered her clothing and acquaintance, detached herself from family life and come and gone as she pleased and, as Hazel did, with her suitcase, asking let or leave of none.

Often, as with this poor victim of a sudden fell blow, she has the reserve, resolution and will try to preserve every claim to maidenly respect. It was this that, perhaps, cost this girl's life and made her part of the swift and gruesome ride of the automobile which sought the night about Teal's Pond with three swaying figures in its seats, two men and a girl, and came back with two men sitting alone.

But whatever may be the precaution, the character or the strength of the young girl, still of thousands of girls taking the risks of Summer outings, the Summer's amusement and the Summer's risky fun, evening suppers and night rides, for some one girl each year death rides behind, murder comes and the ghastly publicity of the coroner's inquest. All her little affairs are spread abroad. Her life is laid bare. Her family is smitten with a double grief, death and disgrace together.

Nor does she who is slain meet the worser fate of those who go where death rides behind. A longer and a sadder death and an end more bitter comes to others among that multitude of young women, athirst for amusemen, who on this or that day gleefully take the risk of dubious trips and doubtful friends.

MUCH NEW UNDER THE SUN.

The tritest, most untrue, of the sayings which daily fall from our lips is, "There is nothing new under the sun," says The Cleveland Leader. It has been the pleasure and the profit of many authors to build upon this theme. Indeed, by their account, the world has not merely failed to advance; it has fallen backward. The ancient customs, the laws now forsaken, were in their opinion, the superior of those of today.

The absurdity of this view might be conceived by trying to imagine how you would go about explaining a typesetting machine to Guttenberg. Consider even the simplest processes involved which would be beyond his knowledge and possibly his understanding—the steam which generates the electricity, which in turn runs the mechanism, that force itself, and the gas which melts the type metal. Franklin might grasp the Corliss engine at first sight, for he lived in the day when steam was beginning to be utilized, but would he be able to comprehend the telephone without a long study of the natural laws of vibration, not to mention the application of the electricity with which he himself experimented?

The Lancet, London, is authority for the statement that bees can adulterate the honey they make. This has been discovered by C. A. Browne and W. J. Young of the United States Department of Agriculture. At the present time the chief adulterants of honey are cane sugar, starch syrup or commercial glucose and invert sugar. It is said to be good practo feed bees adulterants. By miscroscopical examination the genuineness of a sample of honey must be indicated by the number of pollen grains present. By counting these it is possible to obtain approximately the amount of glucose or other adulterants. This statement of the investigators referred to will be especially interesting as it has been repeatedly denied by apiarists and agricultural journals that adulteration of honey in the comb was possible.

Yesterday a horse tied to a hitching post, attracted the attention of a kind passerby, who said, "You poor horse, sweltering in the hot sun!" A few pats on the horse's neck, and the person passed on. The one who saw the incident, drew lessons from it, and right here it is a good place to speak about it, and give a few pointers about the treatment of horses during hot weather. First, don't forget to give your horse a drink of fresh, cooling water, wherever a watering trough is available. Second, during the uncomfortable weather, why not uncheck your horse, thus causing them to "breatho easier" and perhaps, "perspire less." We have just run across the following statement, that in Pennsylvania horses are checked higher than they do in any other state—yet they are no prettier. If that's the case, then nothing will be lost in unchecking them on hot days to add to their comfort. Third, don't drive at break-neck speed. Drive easy—as long as you have plenty of time "to get there." And lastly, don't let your horse stand tied in the scorching sun an hour or two, when its just as easy and far more merciful to tie it in a shadier spot.

An exchange prints the following which is well worth remembering: "We warn all men who attend fairs, etc., to be shy of strangers, and especially those chaps who want to know your full name and where you live. After you part with them hey will telegraph your wife requesting her to send $20 or $30. When the husband returns home, and is informed of the fact, he soon tumbles to the game, but it is too late."

NUPTIAL FIGURES.

A bulletin issued recently by the federal government says that the people of the United States spent $8,765,892 for wedding presents during the month of June. The cost of trousseaus reached $22,765,021, and more than $12,000,000 was spent upon bridal bouquets, wedding breakfasts and hack hire. To the 345,675 clergymen who officiated at the 643,890 weddings of the month the bridegrooms paid $497,365.80, or an average of $1.32¾ a head. Upon wedding journeys, music, rice, liquors, souvenir postcards, tips and the hire of portable porte cocheres a further sum of $4,567,320 was expended, making approximately $50,000,000 in all.

The fact that the cost of wedding presents worked out to more than $13.06 a wedding may surprise the reader, but several interesting footnotes explain it in a satisfactory manner. It is pointed out, for instance, says The Baltimore Sun, that only 22 per cent. of the wedding presents displayed by the average bride were actually bought for the occasion by their real or ostensible donors. Fully 60 per cent. of all presents, says the report, are made to do service a great many times. At the start, let us say, an opulent young bachelor is asked to be best man at a wedding, and, with hysterical generosity, rushes out and buys the bride a $70 clock. Well, six months later, when this bride's third cousin is married, the same clock serves as a wedding present again, and later on, when the third cousin herself is bidden to some other girl's nuptials, it changes hands a third time. Thus the same clock may continue on its rounds for years, until its gilding wears off and its springs break. Often, indeed, it is received by the same bride twice—that is to say, at her first marriage and at her second. But such accidents are apt to sunder friendships and cause ill feeling.

The report proceeds to point out that, while most brides display enormous and costly collections of clocks, water pitchers, hand-painted pictures, soup ladels, oyster forks and other objects of vertu to their friends, it is often true that many of these things are not actual presents. There has arisen, indeed, a tendency to artificially inflate such exhibitions by borrowing articles from relatives and intimates, and even by hiring them from dealers. Thus the bride who displays 100 clocks may have received in point of fact, but 30. The rest may go back, the day after the wedding, to the dealer. Often his representative may be observed standing in a corner of the exhibition chamber, disguised as a waiter or a detective.

CLOTHES AND MANNERS.

The hot wave brings up anew the question of mid-Summer negligee. To what extent may conventionality in clothes he disregarded for comfort? The refusal of the management of a fashionable hotel to serve a guest in his shirt sleeves was an incident of yesterday's news. At the congress of whist players a Southerner of the old school remained true to traditions of respect for the presence of ladies and weltered in broadcloth while the other players sat coatless, says The New York World.

Where is the deadline of decorum to be drawn? A generation has witnessed extraordinary concessions to comfort in Summer clothes. Suits of linen and ducks and seersucker date from before the war, but it is only since the eighties that unstarched shirts and low cut shoes of tan or patent leather have come into general use. It is during that period that outing clothes and the "two-piece" suits of thin fabrics and washable materials have gained their great hold and the belt universally replaced the suspender. "Athletic" underwear so called, is of very recent adoption.

The inroad of negligee on manners is a serious phase of the question. The shirt waist man is endurable in his place, but that place is clearly not at a public dinner table or a formal public gathering, nor yet in an automobile. The question of shirt-sleeves on the streets is a moot one. But does the slight gain in personal comfort compensate for the necessary loss of self respect? The line of propriety in Summer clothes is now so lax that it should not needlessly be overstepped.

Three widows of ex-Presidents survive, though only two of these acted as mistress at the White House. Mrs. Benjamin Harrison married the former President some time after the completion of his term. It is recognized as a fact that at the next session of congress a special act will be passed allowing Mrs. Cleveland five thousand dollars a year during life.

MINING TOOL ACTS AS LIGHTNING ROD.

Attracts Deadly Current, and Scranton Man's Life is Blotted Out.

While walking across a field near St. Ann's monastery, at Scranton, about 2:30 o'clock Tuesday, Joseph Langan was struck by lightning and instantly killed. A mine drill which he was carrying over his shoulder drew the bolt as a lightning rod would.

Langan was employed at the Sloan mine and was on his way to his home when he was overtaken by the storm. Being near the middle of the field he hurried along evidently intent on reaching home as quickly as possible. A bolt of lightning darted from the sky and struck the end of the drill. It then ran down the side of his body and split the sole of his shoe. Queer to relate, no marks were left on the body.

Thomas Rosser of Scranton, who was walking across the field about two hundred feet in the rear of Langan and saw the occurrence. The lightning, according to Rosser, seemed to shoot directly from the heavens to the point of the drill which Langan carried and the next second the man was lying on the ground. When he reached Langan's side he saw at once that he was dead.

Langan was a married man and his wife had just left the city on a vacation.

ACCIDENT AT BURLINGTON.

C. D. Heath Painfully Injured by Being Run Over by Wagon.

The team of C. D. Heath of Burlington, run with a load of hay on Monday of last week, and in attempting to stop them, Mr. Heath was knocked down and one of the hind wheels of the wagon passed over his body just below the shoulders. Dr. Campbell was hastily summoned and upon examination found no bones broken, but Mr. Heath was severely bruised and it will be some time before he will be able to work again.

Mr. and Mrs. Heath seem to have more than their share of misfortune of late, having had two large barns partially unroofed, one cow shed 20x64 feet, and one smaller building completely demolished, and about 30 fruit trees blown down by the cyclone which visited Burlington township recently.

What a Quarter Will Do.

A quarter, 25 cents, will do a great deal at present. For instance, it will pay for The Daily Review for a whole month, that is, it will bring this great daily to your door every day for a month, less than a penny a day. No family should be without it. It is coming on the time when the American people will be intensely interested in the Presidential campaign, and it behooves every citizen to keep posted. The Review gives the news of both parties in an unbiased and interesting manner. It also gives the news of the world and all the news of Towanda and Bradford county that is fit to print. The subscription price is $3 per year, but this does not mean that you have to pay that much to get the paper. A quarter will bring the paper every morning for a month. If you live on a rural route it will be worth 25 cents a day to you for you can keep in touch with the outside world. Send a quarter to the Towanda Printing Co. to day and have the paper sent a month on trial.

Very Thankful.

The following card of thanks recently appeared in Kansas town: "I wish to thank the authorities for quarantining me and my family for two weeks recently, because one of the children had the smallpox. During that time my wife caught up with her sewing, being undisturbed by callers just at meal time. We had three square meals a day, as no one came in and she wasn't permitted to go out. We enjoyed two weks of good long night's sleep and, best of all, a cousin with four children who came to visit us saw the smallpox sign on the door and left the town so scared that she will never come back again. I wish to thank the authorities, and hope they will be equally as thoughtful of our comfort some time again."

Injured in Runaway.

While taking a load of milk to the creamery at Homets Ferry one day last week Mrs. J. H. Howard was seriously injured by being thrown from the wagon, striking on her face and shoulder. The accident happened as she was driving down a steep hill near the Jaggers' place, and was caused by the breaking of ahold-back which let the loaded wagon run into the horse. The animal at once ran and at the turn to the creamery Mrs. Howard was thrown from the wagon, receiving injuries as noted above. While the injuries are serious, Mrs. Howard is yet improving as rapidly as can be expected.—Wyalusing Rocket.

LOSES BOTH WIVES.

Reformatory Inmate is Divorced by Two Spouses.

A much married young man, Orrin T. Holden, now serving a sentence in the Elmira Reformatory for bigamy, no longer has any wife, both having secured divorces from him.

Mrs. Rena M. Holden of Newark Valley, the first wife, on Wednesday obtained an absolute divorce from the reformatory prisoner, and Mrs. Edith J. Holden, wife No. 2, formerly of Owego and now of Auburn, has had her marriage to Holden annulled.

Holden was arrested last December for assaulting his wife, Edith, in Flemingville. He was not tried on that charge, but held for bigamy, it developing that he had not secured a divorce from his first wife, the daughter of Frank Hinsedale of Newark Valley, when he married Mrs. Edith Allen, daughter of Jud Joslyn, foreman of a Lehigh bridge gang.

The first marriage was performed in 1902 and the second in Maine in November, 1905. His first wife left Holden because he abused her and returned to her home in Newark Valley.

To his second wife he represented that he had procured a divorce in California.

LIFETIME HOARD ROLLS OUT.

Injured Lumberman Inadvertently Shows Lots of Cash.

The contents of a dirty red bandanna handkerchief, tied into a little bundle, created a big surprise at the Williamsport hospital Wednesday night. The bundle belonged to David Lewis, a woodsman, who was taken to the hospital from Sullivan county with a broken leg.

Before being asked anything about pay he declared that he had but $3 in money, and he produced it. When his belongings were being put in a locker the bandanna bundle fell and was untied. Out of it rolled a lot of bills. A count showed $1,517 in all, the savings of years in a lumber camp.

Unique Church Service.

Something new in the way of church services was enjoyed by the attendants at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening. It was a service of story and song entitled "Saved at Sea." The story was very interesting, and the music was very inspiring and attractive. The "unique service" as it was called was a success in every respect, and the pastor and choir received many compliments from members of the congregation.

Want New Trial.

Judge Fanning Thursday granted a rule in the case of the C. B. Little, adminstrator, vs. the county of Wyoming, to show cause why the verdict of the jury in the recent trial shall not be set aside and a new trial granted. The matter will be heard during the next term of argument court. This case was tried in Towanda last week, a verdict of $973 in favor of the plaintiff administrator being rendered on Saturday night of last week. Now the defendant county of Wyoming wants this verdict set aside and a new trial granted.

May Lose Both Hands.

Miss Blanche Logue of Montoursville, met with an accident last Friday at Eagles Mere which may cost her the use of both hands. CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

Arthur Geder Attacks G. A. Powell(and is Now in Jail.

Arthur Geder, colored, recently returned from the Eastern penitentiary, is in the county jail awaiting a hearing on Monday before 'Squire Orcutt on a charge of assault and battery and surety of the peace, preferred by G. Albert Powell, also colored. The trouble arises out of a bitter feeling of long standing between the two men.

On Thursday night of last week Geder, while somewhat intoxicated made up his mind that he would settle accounts with Powell. About midnight Thursday the two men met near the Arcade block, and before Powell knew what was going on, he was down with Geder on top. Two other colored men who were with Powell, pulled Geder off, tearing his clothes in shreds in so doing. This ended hostilities at that point.

Geder then went to his boarding place and to bed. He arose about 4:30 Friday morning, and according to the story told the police, borrowed a razor and started away saying he was going to find Powell and settle accounts with him for keeps. The police were informed at 5 o'clock Friday morning, and Officer Allen went to the barn of Congressman Kipp where Powell works, and there found Geder waiting outside. The officer approached carefully, and before Geder knew what was up, he was under arrest. He resisted but when the officer told him he would shoot if he did not submit, he gave in and accompanied the officer to the lockup.

Friday morning, Powell preferred a charge of assault and battery and surety of the peace against Geder, and upon being arraigned before 'Squire Orcutt he was remanded to jail to await a hearing on Monday. After being placed in jail, Chief Miller and Deputy Ward searched Geder and down in his stocking they found a razor. A charge of carrying concealed weapons has also been preferred against him.

MOON PREVENTS WRECK.

Enables Engineer to See Railroad Tie Bound to Track.

Owing to the fact that a full moon made it almost as light as day, a wreck was prevented on the Lehigh Valley railroad near Port Bowkley, eight miles from Wilkes-Barre, early Wednesday morning.

The engineer of a south-bound locomotive, saw, clearly defined in the moonlight, a large railroad tie fastened to the north-bound track. It was evidently intended to wreck the Buffalo Express leaving Wilkes-Barre at midnight, which was the next train to pass the place. Search for the would-be wreckers is now being made.

Raising the Price.

The three principal hotels of Tunkhannock have advanced the price of meals from 25 to 35 cents, for ordinary days, and to 50 cents for a Sunday dinner. The local paper says that while all three hotels are rated as $2 per day houses, they have had a curious custom for years of discriminating in favor of Wyoming county people by giving them meals for a quarter. Traveling men sitting at the same table and eating the same viands were invariably charged a half dollar. Justification was found in the allegation that strangers look for $2 per day hotels, and to charge them less would militate against the reputation of the house.

Myersburg Assault Case.

Charles Davies, a resident of Myersburg, charged by Mrs. Mary Lamphere also of Myersbrug with aggravated assault with a knife upon her son, John Lamphere, was before Justice of the Peace Charles M. Hall Wednesday, Juy 15. After hearing the tstimony of several witnesses, Justice Hall decided to hold the defendant on $200 bail to appear at the next term of court. S. H. TO INVESTIGATE LAD'S RECORD.

Binghamton Police Have C. Ezra Everett, Who Claims Towanda as Home.

The Binghamton Press of Thursday says: "A 20 years old train rider was taken from a Lackawanna frieght car at about 9:45 o'clock* Wednesday night by Lackawanna Detective Fitzgerald. The lad was locked up for the night and arraigned before Judge Wales in Police Court Thursday morning.

"The young man gave the name of Charles Ezra Everett and said he lived in Towanda. He also said that he was connected with the Johnsons, who were prominent several years ago in connection with the famous Towanda murder case. When Judge Wales asked him if he had ever been arrested before, Everett answered that he had served two years for breaking railroad signal lights and causing a wreck.

"Everett appeared to act in a dazed manner. He was almost in tears when he said that he was trying to work his way to Athens. He admitted he was guilty of illegal train riding and was sentenced to 10 days in jail. This will give the police time to look up his record."

Awarded Heavy Damages.

The adjusters of the claim of L. M. Brink against the Mississippi & Vicksburg railroad have awarded him $2,500 damages. Mr. Brink has accepted the award and received a check from the company for that amount. About two years ago the state of Pennsylvania paid the railroad fare of all surviving members of the 50th Pa. Vols. to the dedication of the monument erected on the battlefield at Vicksburg, Miss. Comrade Brink was a member of this regiment and went there. On his return the train was wrecked and Mr. Brink injured. After two years of legal delay, the company sent an adjuster here, who, after looking over the claim, made a settlement. Although the award is not large, yet it is something to help Comrade Brink in his declining years. —LeRaysville Times.

WHAT MR. MITCHELL SAW.

District Attorney Favorably Impressed With Penal Institutions.

District Attorney H. K. Mitchell was in Philadelphia Monday of this week. He went with Sheriff Griffin, who took Christopher Cheeks and Michael Kinney respectively to the Cherry Hill penitentiary and Glen Mills House of Refuge. Mr. Mitchell had not before visited either of these institutions, and he found them interesting.

At Glen Mills there are 800 boys divided into 15 families on a farm of 500 acres. They are under restraint, of course, but a part of each day is given over to play. Not only is their education looked after but they are taught various useful trades. There is much to inspire them, to lift them out of bad ways and start them on the road to useful citizenship. There is little else at Glen Mills than the institution. Each family has its own house, besides which there is a fine gymnasium, a chapel for religious services, an administration building, etc.

The sheriff and Mr. Mitchell paid a brief visit also to the House of Refuge in Philadelphia for girls, which has a present population of about 300, some of whom are from this county. There they found a lamentable lack of room quite in contrast with the happy state of affairs at Glen Mills.—Troy Gazette-Register.

A Peculiar Accident.

The day before the Fourth Eugene Wilson met with a very peculiar accident, and but for timely help it is likely that death would have resulted. He fell on his back porch and struck the side of his neck just under the jaw against the brass cross-piece of the handle to the water hydrant, one arm of the cross-piece penetrating his neck and coming through into the back part of his mouth. He was held fast in this position until his wife discovered him, and finally succeeded in extricating him. Dr. Davidson dressed the wound, which was a bad one, and he is recovering.—Canton Sentinel.

To Make Meat Tender.

How many cooks know that when boiling meat—corned beef, chicken, in fact, meat of any kind—a tablespoonful of vinegar to a large piece, a smaller to a smaller piece placed in the water when first put over the fire, will make it deliciously tender. There will be positively no flavor of the vinegar in the meat when cooked.

FAVORS HUNTERS' TAX.

Dr. Kalbfus of the State Game Commission, Has Fund Scheme.

Dr. Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the State Game and Fish commission, has been in Towanda and vicinity looking over the game situation. To provide funds with which to restock the state with game birds, the Doctor favors the passage by the next legislature of a hunters' gun tax of $1 a year. New York, Illinois and other states have such laws, and the results thus far justify their passage.

The town and city-dwelling sportsmen, who are about half of the whole number, almost without exception, favor the law, while the residents of the country where the game would be placed are many of them opposed to it.

Dr. Kalbfus would be glad to see Hungarian quail tried in Pennsylvania. They are larger than our quail, being between the bob white and the common pheasant in size, and resemble the prairie chicken. They multiply rapidly and are a fine game bird.

Has Philadelphia Engagement.

SAYRE SHOP BALL TEAM ANNIHILATED BY ATHENS.

"Jake" Northrup Made Swattists Look Like Wooden Men.

In their own dooryard, under their own conditions and before their very faces, also the faces of three thousand base ball bugs, "Jake" Northrup of Monroeton, Pa., aided and abetted by Martin Lally, also of the Towanda ball team, on Saturday, after dinner time, made the Sayre shop ball team look like wooden men.

Northrup and Lally, the famous Towanda battery, did not do it alone, but they played the heavy parts, and were right royally assisted by seven light hearted, nimble fingered, speedy athletes from Athens. What these nine young men, playing under the glad rag of Athens, handed to the Sayreites resembled one of those things in the centre of a doughnut. In other words on the Riverside grounds at Sayre, on Saturday, Athens shut the Sayre shop team out, the score being 4-0.

It would be adding insult to injury to tell the unsuspecting public all that Athens did to the shop team, and let it suffice when it is noised about that it was a plenty. Athens came to Towanda on Friday, and Northrup pitching for the locals, sent them home with a get some to Towanda's seven select tallies. Then the next day which was Saturday, Northrup joined the Athens team for a little more exercise, went right up the Lehigh Valley west bound track all the way to Sayre, Pa., and there handed the shop team what they should have had on Friday, July 10, and what they were getting until a foul tip passed ball was allowed to go into the crowd counting as a third strike, scoring Sayre's first run on that dreary afternoon.

"JAKE" NORTHRUP

Not as he looks, but as he seems as he is about to hurl his "phamous phade" ball.

MARTIN LALLY

Northrup had visions of that deal and he just made up his mind that he would make those shop boys take their medicine in homeopathic doses even if it did hurt the feelings of some. After he was through, the Packer hospital and every doctor in the shop town was busily engaged rubbing salve on the fans, easing the pain which lingered where the bumps used to be.

Northrup was working so nicely that he not only made the Sayre swattists look like wooden men, but he so dazed the "emergency brigade" that they forgot to rush on the field and break up the game, a la Newark Valley.

In the neighborhood of about a dozen of the shop stick artists just tore the wind all to pieces trying to locate the spheroid. About three of them made hits, one being for three bases by accident. The hit was good for one pad, but it took a bad bound and the order was given to the fielder to let the man gallop awhile just to make it appear like a ball game, and when he was halted he had reached the third pillow. He got no further, as the next man hit plunk to the pitcher, and the next and third made a noise like an electric fan and the side was out. That was the nearest Sayre go to the lunch counter, sometimes called the home plate.

Captain Cranmer of the Shop team, the surest hitter of all, struck out three times during the game. For him Northrup had his 'phamous phade" ball working. When the pill would leave Northrup's hand it looked like a toy balloon but when it went over the platter it had faded to the size of a BB pellet. Several other Sayre batters were fooled on this "phamous phader," and the ball was examined occasionally to see if a collapsible spheroid was not being dished up, disguised as a Spalding official.

Behind Northrup's superb and fashionable performing was the stylish cavorting of Lally, the Towanda catcher who secreted himself in the shade of the home plate, fanning himself with his mit when the Sayre batters were not making enough breeze with their willows. Out on the spreading acres were Mulligan, the tall boy, Griggs, the gallant, Tucker, the all-to-the-good, Hurrying Hoag, Klouting Klinko, Letmeafterem Lambert, Surenough Swartwood, and Neverlate Lawlor. This was the same team which played in Towanda on Friday with the exception of Tucker and Klinko.

For the Shop team Mahaney was on the gummy gum. He was touched up rather liberally, the Athenians being very familiar with his slants. Poor support at critical stages caused Athens to score two of their four runs. The other two were earned by clean clouting.

There was but little betting on the game, as when it was known that Northrup was going to pitch for Athens, the Sayre sports were very coy and coinsky clinching. After seeing the work of the Athens team in Towanda on Friday, and knowing that Sayre wouldn't have a look in, Towanda sports sent up $500 to bet on the game, but there was no Sayre money in sight.

An amusing incident occurred along about the eighth inning. Orders were issued to the Shop band to play "God Save the Queen," and also the game, but the bass drummer got in wrong and led off with a few strains from "I Got Mine, Boys," while the tenor drummer to save the day bravely rendered the third verse of "Ain't it Awful Mabel," after which some one in the grandstand produced a shoe horn and sympathetically played "The Balloon is Coming Down."

William Winters umpired the game, and did it in not only a very satisfactory but also a masterly manner. There were few if any kicks on his decisions.

Experts Do Some Figuring.

The whitewash of Sayre has given the experts something to figure on. In Towanda on Friday with Northrup in the box, the City of Promise team shut out Athens 7-0. The next day, Athens with the same Northrup in the box shut out Sayre 4-0. Now the experts figure that with Northrup in the box, Towanda can beat Sayre with five men.

It is also figured that Northrup who on Friday and Saturday pitched 18 innings without allowing a score, and as it is the third time this summer he has pitched against the shop team, could if occasion demanded it, don a stand up collar, sweater and nose glasses, and pitch a full week against the Sayre team without there being any particular danger of them scoring, or he dislodging the nose glasses or soiling his collar.

ATHENS WHITEWASHED.

Towanda Shut Out Up-River Boys in an Uninteresting Game.

The Towanda ball team, the fastest aggregation in Northern Pennsylvania, the horsehide heelers "afraid of no one," Friday afternoon on the East Side lawn, handed the strong Athens team a cipher with the rim knocked off. In other words, baseballically speaking, the locals trimmed the up-river boys, by a score of 7-0. Athens went down to a bad defeat, but not disgrace, for they came, they played like sportsmen and when it was all over took their basket of goose eggs and went home well pleased with their treatment in the City of Promise.

It is no disgrace to be defeated by Towanda, as there is not a team in Northern Pennsylvania or Sourthern New York which would have had a look in with the locals yesterday. "Jake" Northrup, the mighty slamist from Monroeton, was on the slab for the locals and there was nothing to it after he got in action. Seventeen of the Athens boys clubbed holes in the breezes, and only two of them connected for safe hits. Mulligan got two bingles, and Davidson one, but they were so scattered that they did not count. The locals played league ball behind Northrup and the exhibition they put up was all that could be desired.

The game was very uninteresting from the fact that Athens could not get a man anywhere near the platter. Davidson and Morrison, the crack Ulster battery did the heavy work for Athens, and did it well, all but a couple of innings in the early stage of the game when Davidson was wild. The first three innings, the locals touched Davidson up for six hits which netted six runs, two of which were unearned. After that they got but three hits, making a total of nine.

The Athenians did not have their regular team, there being four substitutes in the lineup. Following was the lineups of the two teams:

Towanda—Hinman, lf; T. Dempsey, 2b; J. Dempsey, 3b; Northrup, p; J. Madigan, cf; Russell, rf; Smith, rf; Bazzett, rf; Corbett, ss; Turner, 1b; Lally, c. Athens—Swartwood, ss; Lambert, 3b; Griggs, 2b; Mulligan, 1b; Morrison, c; Hoag, lf; Lawler, rf; Yong, rf; Splan, cf; Davidson, p.

Score by innings:

Towanda .....0 2 4 0 0 0 0 1 x—7
Athens .....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0

Summary—Earned runs, Towanda 2. Two base hits, Lally and Corbett. First base on balls, off Northrup 1, off Davidson 4. Struck out, by Northrup 17, by Davidson 3. Official scorer, O. L. Smiley. Umpire, Edward Walker.

ATHENS WON EASILY.

Defeated the Fast Mansfield Team by Score of 13-1.

The strong Athens team, on the Athens Driving park grounds Wednesday, July 15, easily defeated the fast Mansfield team by a 13-1 score.

Yong, the league pitcher, who is playing with Athens, was in the box, and the big fellow simply toyed with the boys who threw the hooks into the Sayre shop team by a 5-2 score last Saturday. He allowed but six safe hits. Bailey started the game for Mansfield, but was knocked out of the box, and Childs took his place, but it was too late, as Athens already had the upper hand.

"Jake" Northrup, the Bucknell university star, who has been pitching great ball for Towanda, played short for Athens, and covered himself all over with brand new glory. He accepted every chance which came his way, and did some terrific clouting. He was at bat five times, made two singles, a two bagger, and topped it all off with a home run. His batting was one of the features of the game.

OLD TIME BALL GAME.

Contest Pulled Off at Monroeton Twenty Years Ago Friday.

On July 17, 1888, just 20 years ago Friday a great ball game was pulled off at Monroeton, and The Enterprise of this week publishes an account of it taken from the files of the paper. The Enterprise says:

"Some of our readers will remember the game and its laughable features. Just one-half the players have passed away but none have been forgotten. The article appeared in the Monroeton Enterprise of July 19, 1888, and is as follows:

Hard Knocks vs. Straight Arrows.

"An old-fashioned game of base ball—something out of the usual order in these days, was played on the Monroeton grounds on Tuesday afternoon, and from the large gathering of people from this and the neighboring towns, it was evident that much interest is taken in the game of ye olden times. Especially was there a large attendance of ladies. The game was called at 2 o'clock, Henry Tracy and Newt Rhinevault choosing sides as follows:

The Hard Knocks.

"Hen Tracy, aged 59; Hen Ingham, aged 57; Bill Dodge, aged 66; Ben Wilcox, aged 73; John Satterlee, aged 56; John Lantz, aged 46; John Hinman, aged 61; O. B. Farr, aged 44; George Kipp, aged 41; Bruce Davids, aged 53.

The Straight Arrows.

"Newt Rhinevault, aged 46; Sol Tallada, aged 69; Bart Young, aged 52; Bill Holland, aged 55; John McMillan, aged 49; Jud Blackman, aged 41; Jack Tallada, aged 61; Deri Bullock, aged 54; Walt Bull, aged 47; Hod Rockwell, aged 54.

"This composed material for two formidable teams, and the way the players struck out it looked like business, and when one could see that some of them 'were there' in their younger days. Freeman Sweet, aged 78 years, and A. L. Cranmer, aged 79, were chosen as tally-men. What these two old and pleasant gentlemen do not know about old time base ball is not worth knowing. In their times no kid gloved games were played, but it was nip and tuck, fair and square all the time, if they had their hands in it. This game was an interesting one, and as it progressed it was wonderful how the old fellows warmed up and made 'hits' and 'strides' that could well be envied by the modern ball player and which created much amusement for the spectators who were not sparing in applause. The game lasted about two hours, when it was found that 'The Hard Knocks' had a tally of 22, and 'The Straight Arrows' 16—the 'Hard Knocks' being the victors. The best of feeling existed throughout the game and the pleasant association wound up at the Summers House, and the way the good things were attacked we were convinced that an old-fashioned game of base ball is good for at least to get up an appetite. The gate money paid all expenses."

The George Kipp listed with the "Hard Knocks," is the Hon. George W. Kipp of today, present congressman from this district. Many Review readers will remember the players who took part in the game, which at the time, 20 years ago, was the talk of Central Bradford county.

Cherokee Indians Coming.

Next week Wednesday, the famous Cherokee Indian baseball team will visit Towanda, and cross bats with the Towanda team on the East Side grounds, both afternoon and evening. Miss Maud Nelson, the greatest female ball player in the world, will pitch the first three innings for the Indians. The Indians carry their own canvass for enclosing the ground, and also a grandstand, and an electric light plant for lighting the grounds for the night game. This will be a genuine novelty, and will no doubt attract a large crowd. Another strong attraction will be the Cuban Giants who will play Towanda on Thursday afternoon.

Cuban Giants Coming.

The famous Cuban Giant ball team, composed of professional colored players, will play the Towanda team on the East Side grounds on Thursday afternoon of this week. The Giants were scheduled for Tomorrow, Wednesday, but a mixup in the dates caused a cancellation. Manager Russell received a telegram last night stating that they would be here on Thursday of this week instead of Wednesday. This will be the game of the season. Northrup will pitch for Towanda.

Laquin Won From Hillsgrove.

At Laquin on Saturday, the Laquin team defeated the Hillsgrove nine by the score of 9-8.

A Challenge.

Manager Russell of the Towanda baseball team hereby challenges any team in Bradford county to a series of five games for a purse or gate receipts. Answers should be sent to The Review or L. J. Russell, manager Towanda baseball team.

PLENTY OF COAL.

Enough Fuel to Last for Centuries, Says Experts.

According to experts of the United States Geological Survey, there is coal enough in Pennsylvania to last, at the rate of mining which was carried on last year, nearly five hundred years. To be exact, M. R. Campbell, the expert who furnishes this optimistic estimate, states that at the rate of production in 1907, which was the banner year, there is coal enough to last 490 years.

During the past half dozen years there have been many and various estimates as to the limit of the coal supply. Recently, mining experts in the coal assessment case, supposed to be thoroughly familiar with the local field, have stated that from 30 to 75 years was the limit; that at the present rate of mining there would not be a pound of minable coal left in that time.

Now the government expert comes along with the statement that the anthracite deposits originally contained 21,000,000,000 short tons and that of that amount only 4,000,000,000 short tons have been mined. Should Expert Campbell be right, there is a chance that Scranton will continue to be the mining metropolis of Pennsylvania for many, many years to come.

The dispatch received from the Associated Press chronicling this new estimate is as follows:

"That the coal originally in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields aggregated 21,000,000,000 short tons and in the bituminous fields 112,574,000,000 short tons, leaving still in the ground 17,000,000,000 short tons of anthracite and about 110,000,000,000 of bituminous, is the estimate of the situation reported by M. R. Campbell, of the United States Geological Survey. He figures that at the rate of production reached in 1907, the available coal supply in Pennsylvania would last about 490 years."

BURLINGTON.

Hon. George Moscrip of Towanda, was a recent caller at D. V. Campbell's.

William R. Lawrence of Rochester, has been spending the past two weeks of his summer vacation visiting with friends in this place. As is usually the case with the city boy spending his vacation with country friends, Mr. Lawrence wished to carry back with him a goodly supply of "rural tan," but in obtaining this much desired covering, he had the misfortune to get more than was actually needed, in the form of severe burns from exposure to the sun, so that it is with great inconvenience that he is able to dress himself.

John V. Darrow of the class of 1908 of the Mansfield State Normal school, has been hired as instructor in the intermediate department of the Luthers Mills high school.

Frederick Morley started on Sunday for Rochester, where he will begin work, lasting during the summer months.

All are pleased to note that, almost without exception, no vestige remains of the weather critic in this locality. Though in former years men had to endure the disagreeable bore of complaints made by the cronic "weather crank," yet kind providence seems to have quieted such useless clamor this year by giving weather suitable to all.

The barn of W. L. Lane, though recently in ruins as the result of the severe wind storm of several weeks ago, is now under rapid reconstruction. Mr. Lane expects to have it ready to receive this year's hay crop.

Blight has manifested its presence in the potato fields.

PUTTING SAWDUST TO PRACTICAL USE.

Making the Waste Into Flour to Be Used in Dynamite Manufacture.

Sawdust is one of the puzzling wastes in lumbering operations. The waste is serious, too, for the kert—the part cut out by the saw in the mill and transformed into sawdust—always bears a rather high ratio to the boards obtained. In cutting thin stuff, one-fourth of the log, or even more, may be kerf.

Efforts to turn sawdust into pulp for the paper mill have usually been unsuccessful on account of mechanical difficulties in handling. In several European countries, however, a new way has been found of turning sawdust to account. The sawdust, chiefly pine and fir, is ground with millstones, exactly as old-time mills made cornmeal, or wheat or rye flour. Expensive machinery is not required, but it is necessary to take special precautions against fires which might start from sparks between the millstones.

The sawdust flour is sold to the dynamite factories to be mixed with nitroglycerin and forms the body or absorbent for that high explosive. It is also in demand for the manufacture of cheap blotting papers. The mills in the Harz mountains, in Germany, an important manufacturing center, are kept busy meeting this demand.

The price of the "flour" in Germany ranges from $7.50 to $12.50 a ton. It is shipped in bags, like meal, or in bales of amout 40 cubic feet, made by means of high pressure.

TROY FAIR.

Superintendents Named for Next Annual Exhibition Sept. 15-18.

The premium list of the Troy fair, Sept. 15-18, will be ready for distribution early in August. Liberal prizes are offered in the stock department for grade cattle as well as thoroughbreds of the several breeds and other changes and additions have been made to last year's offerings. An extra large edition has been ordered of the book, which this year contains no individual advertising.

The superintendents of departments are all new, as follows:

Cattle, Austin Leonard; horses, J. L. Rockwell; sheep and swine, F. N. Hubbard; poultry, James McMahan; farm products, James Lamkin; culinary, Mrs. F. L. Ballard; merchants, Liston Bliss; ladies, Mrs. D. F. Pomeroy; fine arts, Mrs. O. B. Ballard; floral, Mrs. W. S. Sweet; machinery, W. S. Sweet.

The management says the fair was never in better condition financially. It places responsibility for the success of this year's exhibition where it belongs, upon the people of Western Bradford and Eastern Tioga, and asks for a continuation of their support and patronage.

SPRINGFIELD.

Judson Phillips and wife went to Elmira Saturday.

Mrs. Frank Ripley is ill.

Mansfield Grace and wife of Loman, N. Y., visited at James Parmenter's last week.

Rev. W. P. Hazelton entertained his son, from New Jersey last week, and also May Hall and friend from Syracuse.

DOWNWARD COURSE.

Fast Being Realized by Towanda People.

A little backache at first.
Daily increasing till the back is lame and weak.
Urinary disorders quickly follow;
Diabetes and finally Bright's disease.
This is the downward course of kidney ills.

Charles M. French, 233 Bridge street, Athens, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills gave me more relief from kidney trouble than any other remedy I previously used. I had sharp pains across my loins and frequently was unable to get about on account of the lameness in my back. To stoop or walk in an erect position greatly increased my suffering and after sitting in a chair for any length of time, it was impossible for me to rise without grasping something for support. I used plasters and liniments but they failed to help me and I became so bad that I had to quit work. A neighbor who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results, advised me to try them and I procured a box. They gave me prompt relief, banishing the lameness in my back and restoring my health in general. I am glad to recommend such an efficient remedy as Doan's Kidney Pills."

Plenty of proof like this from Towanda people. Call at Dr. H. C. Porter's drug store and ask what his customers report.

WANTS AN OPENING.

An eastern reader of these notes, a young man of twenty-two years living in the city of New York, writes inquiring what the chances are farther west for a young man who is well and strong and willing to work, but yet who wants to get into some kind of business for himself, preferably an outdoor occupation, like farming. It is a very natural thought on the part of New Englanders that there are better opportunities for getting ahead in the Mississippi valley states and with the resident of the central states that better opportunities are to be found on the Pacific slope. There is doubtless truth in the contention of those in both sections referred to. Yet before going west we should advise our young friend to look around a bit near home. Many western agricultural papers have been publishing articles of late relative to opportunities in New England, especially along the line of taking hold of some of the so called abandoned or unproductive farms. Not long since there was cited in these notes the case of a young man who had traveled the country over and who had equipped himself for an agricultural professorship or a responsible position in the government service and yet who after taking everything into account had decided to go back to the old home farm in York state and put out more orchards and otherwise develop intelligently the possibilities of an eastern farm. There is little question that there is more doing in a general way in the central western than in the New England states and more in the western group than in the central, but in both sections considerable ready money is needed for one to buy a farm or ranch, unless it be a small one, or to embark in a paying business enterprise. Our friend does not advise us of his tastes, so that we hardly feel qualified to give him specific information as to the pursuit which he should follow. But, whatever these may be, it is a pretty good idea for one who contemplates locating in a new or distant section of the country to visit such a place before acquiring any property interest with a view to ascertaining what the prospects or possibilities of the section may be. This may mean the paying out of a considerable sum for car fare and hotel bills, but in the end it is often the cheapest way to do.

BOYS AND WORK.

While there are practically no people who do not regret the selfish and hard hearted economic influences of the times which condemn little boys of from ten to fourteen years to all day or all night labor in the breakers in anthracite collieries or in factories where conditions are unwholesome, yet a child labor law which will tend to prevent boys under fourteen working during their spare time and serve to give them instead opportunity for idleness, shiftlessness and mischief could hardly be viewed as entirely beneficent in its working. It is a matter of common observation as well as statistics that the bums and criminals with which the country is cursed are recruited almost entirely from a class of boys and girls who do not go to school or have regular and definite work to do during the formative years from ten to sixteen. It is for this reason that the cities and towns produce ten no-accounts and criminals where the country produces one or two, and this would seem to be almost entirely due to the fact that on the farm the boy has something to do and does not spend his time in loafing or mischief. By all means have a wholesome child labor law, but let it be so framed that it will not tend to demoralize and keep out of employment children who would be unquestionably the better off for it.

WILLOW FOR POST TIMBER.

A north Iowa reader of these notes inquires if the common willow cannot be utilized for post timber in place of high priced cedar. He writes that he has on his place a good many willows which he thinks of utilizing in this manner. He suggests the wisdom of dipping the posts in hot tar so that it will cover them to a point six inches above the ground after they are set. While he have never tried this method of treating posts, we have seen it highly recommended. A well seasoned peeled willow post will last from four to seven years without any tar treatment. It is safe to say that if the posts were well seasoned and dipped in the hot tar their durability would be nearly trebled. This has been the case in experiments in which other woods have been used, and it is quite likely that it would hold good with willow. With post timber high and the supply becoming yearly more limited, it would seem but the part of wisdom to treat with tar or other preservative all posts to be set of whatever kind. The small expense involved is returned many times in the increased life of the post.

The flock of sheep should be rotated from pasture to pasture, just as should corn, clover, oats or other crop to new and, if best results are to be secured. Change seems to be the law of some forms of animal as well as vegetable life.

A chunk of cotton or a soft rag moistened with carbon bisulphide and placed in the hole of woodchuck or skunk will put either one out of business without the use of elbow grease and spade. All but one hole of the burrow should be plugged up, and the last just as soon as the dope has been inserted.

One of the latest methods for killing landelions to be recommended is spraying the plants with a solution made by lissolving two ounces of iron sulphate in a gallon of water. Such a spray is said to be strong enough to kill the landelions, but does little injury to blue grass or white clover.

The sword fern, which is one of the most attractive ornamental house plants, seems to thrive better in those rooms where the temperature is most even and where it is not exposed to the direct rays of the sun. Experiments with a thrifty four-year-old fern of this variety in the writer's home lead to the above conclusion.

It is during the rainy weeks of the spring and fall that the placing of eave spouts on the feed yard side of the barn will tend to keep the yard from miring down and becoming an all around nuisance. Such an equipment will also mean more comfort for man and beast and a more economical handling of the barnyard manure because of less soaking and leaching.

If mildew gathers on the books on the library shelves or on the clothing in the closets, it is a pretty sure sign that the foundation of the house is low and improperly ventilated or that there is too much shade about the house. In either case the trouble should be righted, as the good health of the members of the family is of vital consideration.

In spite of the fact that the necessity of using commercial fertilizers in the state of Illinois was not considered within the range of possibility twenty years ago, $1,000,000 was nevertheless expended in the purchase of these articles last year. This move has been made necessary by a careless handling of the soil in which more was taken from it in the shape of crops than was replaced in the form of fertilizers.

If the trees bordering your place and overhanging the sidewalks have low hanging limbs which brush the hats or parasols of passersby, it is time you got busy with a saw and trimmed them up. Thrifty trees grow very fast and will send out these low branches before one realizes it. In the same way the trees about the house will thicken up soon after a previous year's pruning so as to practically envelop the house in shade.

If the strawberry bed is in its second or third year and is quite full of grass and weeds, it may be easily renovated by cutting it over closely with a scythe, burning or removing the litter and ruttling up and cultivating thoroughly all of the bed but a narrow strip in the center of each row. From the roots left undisturbed enough runners will start to replant the bed. This job may be done as soon as the crop of berries is picked.

MOTTLED BUTTER.

Usually the blame for mottled butter is laid to improper salting, but tests show that salt cannot produce this result unless the butter contains an uneven distribution of buttermilk. If the butter is free from buttermilk, no matter how unevenly the salt is mixed, the streaks, or mottles, will not be produced. When churning is done so as to make the butter granules the size of rice grains and these are carefully washed twice with water at a temperature below 45 degrees, removing most of the buttermilk adhering to the outer surface of the granules, no mottles are obtained. The amount of proteid in mottled butter is greater in the light portions than in the darker portions and is the cause of the light color, or mottles. Salt brine does not change in any way the color of butter fat Salt brine as it commonly occurs in butter has the power of hardening and localizing the proteid particles, the action requiring several hours for completion. In mottled butter the light portions usually contain less than the darker portions. It can be concluded, then, that mottles in butter are due primarily to the presence and uneven distribution of buttermilk adhering to the outer surface of the small granules and to the hardening and localizing effect of the salt brine upon the proteid of the buttermilk thus retained in the butter. The light portions of mottled butter owe their light color to the presence of localized proteid. The yellow or clear portions occur where the spaces between the butter granules are filled with clear brine and are comparatively free from casein compounds. Several hours are required to complete the action of the brine upon the proteisa of the butter. Mottles in butter can be prevented by avoiding those conditions that retain buttermilk in the butter and observing those conditions which favor the removal of buttermilk from butter granules before salting. The butter granules, as said above, should be about the size of rice grains and should be washed twice with water at a temperature of 35 to 45 degrees

The use of paint is entirely justifiable not only from the standpoint of the looks of the buildings, but because of the protection which is thus afforded the wood.

Honesty, integrity and sobriety are the qualities that are sought after by employers these days, more stress being laid upon them than upon prospective employees' mental or physical qualities or equipment.

There is a vital connection between pure fresh air in the dairy barn and milk flow in that fresh air means a good state of health, a vigorous appetite, together with larger powers of digestion and assimilation, which result directly in an increased flow of milk.

A Texas farmer who is today considered the alfalfa king of the world began growing the legume twelve years ago on a tract of five acres. Later his farm contained 100 acres, while now it stretches over 1,400 acres. Last year his receipts from his alfalfa ranch were $109,000.

An old fashioned hardy rose of the double pink variety growing in the neighborhood in which the writer lives is said by old residents of the place to have been sending forth shoots from the same roots continuously for the past thirty-five years. The rose in question is the bush variety and is never covered.

Time was when most any kind of milking and handling of the milk in the stable were put up with provided the cream was handled properly in the dairy. It's different now, there being a full realization of the fact that dirt or odors which get into the milk in the stable cannot be eradicated in the churning or process of buttermaking.

Reports from one province of Japan are to the effect that there is at present growing before a temple of Buddha in one of its cities a pine tree which is said to be 1,200 years old. The tree was planted in front of the pagoda by a zealous devotee as a sort of perpetual free will offering. In all the succeeding centuries the conifer has been carefully tended.

The best way to fight the knot or crab grass which sometimes gets a foothold in the lawn in the summer months is to water the lawn frequently if rainfall is insufficient, thus keeping the lawn grass in a thrifty condition, and cut quite often. Being a hot weather, deep rooted grass, the crab grass flourishes under conditions in which the blue grass will remain at a standstill.

A family of blackbirds which have nested in the writer's yard this season, the location of the nest not being discovered until after the young were nearly ready to fly, have broken up a robin's and a mourning dove's nest and would have treated a catbird's nest similarly had not timely assistance been rendered. The blackbird and bluejay are pirates and should be treated as such.

There are quite a lot of pretty good girls from many points of view who seem to overlook the fact that when a young fellow looks around for a wife he directs his attention to the one who has sunshine in her heart and deftness of hand rather than artificial blushes or powder on her cheeks. There is no deception which is so crude and raw and ill concealed as this. A fool, running, can spot it at a glance.

Next year's raspberry patch will be in a great deal better shape and produce much more fruit if the tips of this year's new shoots are snipped off when they have reached the desired height, from three to four feet. This treatment not only makes them less spindly, but greatly increases the fruit bearing shoots for next year. If allowed to grow in their own way some of the black varieties, especially the Older, will attain a length of ten to twelve feet.

The habits of thought and work that a boy acquires at from ten to fourteen years are quite likely to be largely determining and molding factors in all his after life. On this occasion it is well for the parents to give wise direction in these formative years and for the boy to take himself in hand with a view to developing his powers and talents in the best possible ways. The boy that runs loose and wild during these years without restraint of any kind cannot be expected to develop into a good man any more than a colt similarly handled can be expected to make a tractable and valuable horse.

A friend who sowed rye last fall on a plot of ground—several acres—from which he took a crop of potatoes the latter part of September tells us that, while he pastured this piece well into the winter and turned his cows on it early last spring and did not take them off until the 1st of May, the stand of the cereal is so heavy and the heads filling so well that he anticipates a yield of close to thirty bushels per acre. In addition to furnishing a good bite for his stock when green food was scarce, the putting of the rye on the piece of ground has resulted in keeping it very free from weeds. After the rye is cut he will be able to grow a crop of buckwheat, millet or turnips. We believe that rye might be used a great deal more than it is in the above manner and the weed nuisance abated considerably as a result.

We are pleased to learn that Towanda Valley grange of West Franklin, has purchased a library and case. This speaks well for the grange because it shows a desire to keep in step with the progressive work of the order.

Worthy Secretary Encell Taylor, Esq., of Granville Center grange, reports "something new, as I attended a wedding last week." Of course he officiated.

The Order of Patrons of Husbandry is still gaining numbers at a rapid rate as noted by report for the quarter ending June 30. The state of Washington leads with an addition of 19 granges, followed by an addition of 13 in Pennsylvania and 11 in Idaho. The full number of granges added during the past three months is 96.

The Order of Patrons of Husbandry has not established a national banking system but some of its members have joined with other people forming banks which they have seen fit to call Grange banks. The order does not organize, name nor control these banks, so it is not worth while to spend time in striving to undo what we have nothing to do with. It seems the American Agriculturist invites comment on this subject as brought out in a letter received from Bradford county. Let us all pull together for the strengthening of weak granges and the organization of new ones where needed and thus settle differences of opinion.

As a member of the order for more than one-third of a century, we are pleased to say that we feel proud of our state and national official organs. The National Grange, edited by the national master, and The Grange News, edited by the state master, are both doing good work for the order. It is the duty and should be the privilege of every patron to encourage all active workers who are helping to build and maintain an organization designed for the enlightening and betterment of the tillers of the soil. Even the personal interests of each member call for thorough persistent work that helps to secure the rights belonging to our fellows. From our point of view we have never had so good official organs as at present.

As we "read between the lines," the spirit at times waxes warm yet the grange crop becomes more abundant after thorough tillage by expert husbandmen who know just how to conserve the moisture necessary to produce growth. Many of us have used the sickle and the cradle to gather the crop but now there is another fellow who excels by using the reaper, but do not forget in the grange field it is necessary to use all three utensils at the same season of the year.

Carrie Shores, of Central grange, on Shores Hill, reports concerning grange celebration on the Fourth of July: "It rained so we could not have the celebration in the grove but two good patrons, Fred and Henry Kilmer, opened their house and barn, doing all they possibly could to help the cause along. The school house and church near by were opened for our use. The tables were set on the barn floor.

"The leading features of the day were addresses by Revs. Niles of Rome, and Williams of Horn Brook; and two dandy recitations by Miss Eva Conklin of Wesauking. Mr. Tompkins of Trinket, was present with a phonograph and a fine assortment of records, furnishing music for the day. Between 200 and 300 people were present. The net proceeds were between $35 and $40 and to be used to help build a grange hall in the near future.

"The grove we were to have is very fine and we are to have a grange picnic there after haying and harvest, and desire to have visiting patrons from other granges present to enjoy a good time with 'Central granges.' Central grange is right in preparing for a home of its own. Willing hands work wonders for any cause.

"This is the period of the year when you cannot run your engine under high pressure. You cannot, without danger of an explosion, stuff your firebox with red meats; nor can you double the quantity of the lighter foods because they have so much less nourishment. What you want most to do is to run your gastronomic course under light soil. Be a vegatarian as much as you can. The weather conditions weaken your carrying capacity and lower your power to oxidize what you have eaten. You can get along comfortably by cutting your rations in half.

"You will never keep cool by pouring alcohol in any of its varied forms into your system. The red meats furnish the coal for your furnace, but alcohol soaks it in oil. You can imagine the fierce heat of this combination. Beware of the drink when the sun looks like burnished copper and the air stifles. The cheerful man, the one who believes in a silver lining to every cloud, is going to get through dog days better than the man who is always kicking. The woman who sings through her work will not feel the heat as she who complains and scolds."

From the Lates

Today's Suggestion by Ellen Stan.

PLAIN TUCKED SHIRT WAIST.

THE majority of women care for dress, but often do not know how to go about the matter to obtain the best results. A Frenchman has said that no woman is ugly, but few know how to make themselves look pretty. There are some rules about dressing that are as unchangeable with the well gowned as the laws of the Medes and Persians. First buy the very best of what you do get. Under no circumstances be persuaded to buy a cheap silk in preference to a good gingham. A twenty-five cent gingham will be much more elegant when made up than would a fifty cent silk. Always sacrifice trimming, if need be, to get a better quality of material. Trimmings when they are used must be so arranged as to be a part of the design. For instance, they should form or shape a yoke or outline a revers. To scatter them aimlessly over the material, as is often done by cheap dressmakers, detracts from the gown. Always buy subdued colors. To wear striking things shows a love of display that is distasteful to women of refinement.

When linen collars and cuffs are worn, it is more important that they be spotlessly clean than that they be ornamented with the finest hand embroidery obtainable. Last, but not least, are the shoes. Here it is that the good effects of an otherwise pretty costume is often lost. When one can afford it shoes that match each costume are exceedingly pretty, but if one cannot indulge in this luxury, and one pair must be made to serve on all occasions, plain black is the only good selection.

Illustrative of a pretty shirt waist suitable for either tub or woolen materials is the design shown. It closes at the back and can be made with either high or Dutch neck. The pattern is cut in six sizes—from 32 to 42 inches bust measure. To make this garment for the average person it requires 3⅛ yards of material 27 inches wide or 2 yards 44 inches wide.

Any reader of this paper who desires to secure this pattern may do so by sending 10 cents to this office. Give the number, 3743, and write the full address plainly. The pattern will be forwarded promptly by mail.

DAY AT THE CIRCUS

Towandians and Others Take Day Off and Visit Shows.

THE WEATHER MAN WAS GOOD

Furnished an Excellent Article in the Way of Sunshine and Bracing Ozone—All Americans Love the Circus, and All Enjoy "Show Day."

Thursday was "show day" in Towanda, and the people of this glad and glittering City of Promise, together with the hundreds of others who flocked into the county seat, spent a happy day with the John Sparks' show folks, and all had a good time, in fact some of them had the time of their lives.

The weather man was very good, as he handed out an article of breezes, sunshine and invigorating ozone which would cause the most heartless and unforgiving to forget the unpleasant weather of other days. It was circus day in Towanda, and that means much to the average mortal who calls this section home sweet home.

And who and where is the mortal who does not love a circus? It is a real American institution—developed from our peculiar opportunities and conditions, appealing to the love of wonderful stunts, the love of the animal kingdom, the desire for sightseeing, the love of horse flesh. The children love it as they love almost no other thing. The circus is a word of wonderful witchery that sets the childhood imagination winging weeks beforehand. The older people of course catch the infection and go and see the parade and pay their good money to enter the tents—just to please the children, of course.

If you want to see the unselfish element in American life, the wholesale element of parental unselfishness watch the crowd on a circus day.

Or is it a little desire of the oldsters to see and get into the era of excitement? Anyway, we all love to go, We may get overtired. We may breathe in clouds of dust. We may be blinded in clouds of rising dire; we may get our clothes torn in the crush; we may get hot and dusty and unspeakably dirty; we may suffer in the super-heated, depressing atmosphere of the big tents. But we like it just the same. We may not be able to spare the money, but hang the expense. Everybody is going. What does it matter. The new suit of clothes for Johnnnie can wait. Ditto the new outfit for the other children. We must see the circus.

No matter how often we have gone through the experience. We repeat it as often as a really good circus comes along. This one of yesterday was one of the good ones, and both performances were witnessed by crowds which taxed the capacity of the tent.

The Sparks' shows are not "the biggest on earth," don't claim to be, but it is one of the best of the smaller circuses on the road. Once in the big tent there is something doing all the while, something along the line of what we love in the life of the showman. In the Sparks' shows you don't get dizzy trying to watch three rings and two platforms, but you get your quarter's worth watching a performance that is really worth while.

The parade at noon was witnessed by a crowd which taxed Main street, in fact the size of the crowd was surprising, many people being of the opinion that there would not be a handful of strangers in town. They were fooled, that is, the wise ones, for there were many. Not 25,000, nor half that number, but just a good, big crowd, a regular circus crowd, and after the parade they all flocked to the show grounds.

The crowd pushed and edged and rushed and saw. Babies too small to do anything but lie asleep in tiny little wads under the shade of a carriage were there wedged into the small spaces. All sizes and ages from the smallest were there. The old man limping on a cane and crippled up with rheumatism was there. The fat person, tired, but eager, and the alert old lady were also in the crowd.

Girls in merry widow hats exposing great collections of kissed and unkissed dentistry were there by the score. Young men and maidens sauntered or drove in from Wyalusing, Rome, LeRaysville, Wysox, Rummerfield, Monroeton, Powell, Laquin, New Albany and the surrounding country and drank pink lemonade and had the day of their lives. Mothers lugged children to the imminent peril of the said youngsters. Children clung to mothers' skirts and fretted because they could not see through the dense wall of the crowd. Everybody was there. The world seemed to have knocked off work. It was a holiday, given up to the joy of living on a circus day.

LIGHTNING CURES PARALYSIS.

Remarkable Case at Caton, Near Elmira—Completely Cured.

Mrs. Dennis McCarthy, aged about 60, wife of a well known farmer of Caton, near Elmira, has been cured of the effects of a stroke of paralysis, which affected her left side by being struck by lightning at her home in Caton. It is a remarkable cure such as is but seldon recorded in medical annals.

Recently, during a thunder storm, lightning struck the residence of Dennis McCarthy, shattering every room in the house and breaking all the windows. Three cows in a field nearby were killed. Nine persons were in the house and were affected by the lightning.

It was this shock which has cured Mrs. McCarthy of a paralytic condition which had baffled her physicians. Several months ago Mrs. McCarthy was stricken. Her left side has been paralyzed since. Physicians have been consulted but without result. A local doctor advised electrical treatment. He never expected it would be received in such an unusual manner.

But the lightning has done the work far better than the most learned specialists—it has effected what is believed to be a permanent cure. Mrs. McCarthy is able to attend to her household work and the paralysis has entirely disappeared from her left side. In fact she is as well as evr.

THRILLING RUNAWAY.

James W. Mercur and Daughter, Benise, Painfully Injured.

South Mountain, on the summit of which stands "Tip Top Cabin," the beautiful Summer home of James Watts Mercur, was the scene of a thrilling runaway Saturday noon, during which Mr. Mercur and his 12 years old daughter, Benise, were painfully injured. That Mr. Mercur was not killed or more seriously injured is a miracle.

They left "Tip Top Cabbin," which overlooks the beautiful Susquehanna valley, about 12 o'clock, intending to drive to Towanda. Mr. Mercur was driving one horse hitched to a light surrey, and as they started to descend the steepest place on the dangerous mountain road, one of the holdbacks broke, allowing the surrey to run against the horse. This frightened the animal, and it commenced to kick and run.

Mr. Mercur pluckily held to the reins, bracing his feet against the dashboard, when another terrific kick of the horse caused the dashboard to give away, allowing Mr. Mercur to slide from the seat onto the heels of the horse and then to the ground, going through between the shafts of the surrey. Without a driver the horse raced down the steep mountain side at a terrific pace, finally tearing itself loose from the wagon and bringing up at Woodside.

Benise Mercur, the little daughter of Mr. Mercur, who jumped from the wagon just before her father was thrown out, hurried to his side and seeing that he was injured, ran to a nearby house and, secured help. Mr. Mercur was taken back to "Tip Top Cabin" and Dr. Means of Towanda, was summoned. An examination disclosed a laceration of the scalp which required several stitches to close, bad bruises on the back, shoulders, arms and hips. He will be confined to his home for several days. The little girl was also painfully bruised about the body and limbs in jumping from the surrey.

The surrey was wrecked, but the horse was little the worse after its mad flight down the steep mountain road.

Commenced Work Monday Morning.

Work was commenced Monday morning on the remodeling of the First National bank building. The work which is in charge of Charles Lawrence of Dushore, will be done under the direction and supervision of the bank officials, and not by contract. The front of the building will be moved out even with the front of the Dye & Bresee Hardware store, and Boyle's Book store, in the Lane building. Marble will be used liberally in the new front. The floor will be lowered to a level with the street, and the whole lower floor will be given over to the banking rooms, while over the vaults, a directors' room will be built. It is expected the remodeled building will be ready for occupancy about Dec. 1. During the remodeling the banking business will be done in the room in the Mercur block now occupied by Lilley & Wilson, who will use the C. B. Porter Drug store for their office.

First Bryan Banner.

To DeWitt Clinton DeWitt, young son of DeWitt Clinton DeWitt, the well known Towanda attorney, belongs the credit of unfurling the first Bryan banner in Bradford county. Mr. DeWitt, father of the boy, on Saturday returned from the National Democratic convention where he was a conspicuous figure in the Guffey-Bryan fight, bringing with him a flashy banner bearing the word "Bryan." Saturday evening Mr. DeWitt and his son drove out behind their fine roadster, and the young man proudly waved the banner, while his illustrious father held a stiff rein on the frisky horse. Attorney DeWitt is a dyed-in-the-wool Bryanite, and evidently the boy is a "chip off the old block."

Sentence Deferred.

"Monkey Jim" Vanderpool was before 'Squire Orcutt on Saturday charged with dynamiting the Susquehanna river for the purpose of killing game fish. The charge was preferred by Game Protector and Fish Warden Shoemaker on behalf of the Commonwealth. The hearing occupied the attention of 'Squire Orcutt for the greater part of the day, and at the conclusion the defendant was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs of prosecution. The 'Squire deferred the execution of the sentence until next week, releasing the defendant on bail until that time when he will appeal from the finding of the court. W. P. Wilson was attorney for the commonwealth.

Lehigh Orders Electric Cars.

So satisfactory has been the test that the Lehigh Valley company has made with an electric car over branch roads, run at least once a day, that it has now bought six cars, each 85 feet long, as the shorter ones were not equal to the business required. One of the cars will be permanently placed on the Naples branch, and will make at least one round trip each day, taking the place of the midday train. The shorter car which has been doing service there for a week will be placed on the Honeoye Falls and Hemlock branch. Passengers are well pleased with the service in these cars. —Sayre correspondent Athens News.

CASE APPEALED.

Dr. Hanor Carries Up Sensational Case Against Smith Housel.

Notice of an appeal has been filed in the case of Dr. Welcome A. Hanor of Big Flats, against Smith Housel, for $10,000 damages for the alleged alienations of his wife's affection.

The case was one of the most widely read of any tried in Southern New York within the past year, owing to the sensational character of the charges, the wide acquaintance of the litigants and the unusual testimony that was given by a number of the witnesses. Mr. Housel, the defendant, is well known in Towanda.

Attorney Rockwell for the defendant, and Knapp & Sebring for the plaintiff, added spectacular features to the trial by the sharp repartee in which they continually engaged.

Dr. Hanor practices medicine and conducts a drug store in Big Flats. His wife is young and attractive. Smith Housel is a traveling salesman whose home is in Big Flats. It was alleged by the plaintiff that on various occasions Smith Housel was in the company of his wife and that upon at least one occasion he met her in Elmira and that they went to a hotel. It was alleged that the doctor followed them to the hotel. He did not enter, fearing trouble with Housel if he did.

The verdict was "no cause for action," and Smith Housel was discharged, thinking that the incident had closed. The appeal comes as a surprise to the defendant, his attorney and his friends.

SHOWS SIGNS OF INSANITY.

Warrant Issued For McAsey, Who Threatened to Kill Mother.

A warrant was issued Thursday of last week by Justice Johnson of Athens, for the arrest of Edward McAsey charging him with threats, but the man has not yet been located.

McAsey is evidently insane. He has already been confined in the insane department at Burlington on two different occasions, when he showed unmistakable signs of insanity, but in both instances his mental condition improved and he became apparently rational. Recently, however, he showed signs of lapsing into his former condition and threatened to kill his aged mother with whom he lives on a farm in Athens township.

Word was sent to the county commissioners and they went to Athens to take the man to Burlington. Officers Mulligan and McGovern and Special Officer Corby went to the McAsey farm but the man they were seeking evidently became suspicious and when the officers approached within speaking distance he ran like a deer, disappearing from sight. The officers remained in the vicinity until midnight but McAsey failed to show up. Thursday a warrant was issued for his arrest. It is presumed that driven by hunger, he will be forced to issue forth from his hiding place within a short time.

OWEGO GETS NO SHOP TRAIN.

Lehigh Abandons Idea of Running Another Work Train From Sayre.

"The shop train from Sayre to Owego, proposed by the Lehigh officials some time ago, seems to have been abandoned, as nothing further is heard of it, in spite of the assurances given by the Lehigh men to the Owego business men that the train would surely be started if they were assured of sufficient public support and could get sufficient number of workmen here, both of which provisions they stated were satisfactorily met.

"The Athens and Sayre News says that the train project has been abandoned and says that when it seemed serious threatened, 'Sayre business men got busy at this time and this, together with the talk of compromise on other differences, lead to the abandonment of the idea.' "—Owego Record.

Will Run Dushore Silk Mill.

Thomas Wright, who established and who resigned the superintendency last week, has secured control of the Loyalsack Silk company mill at Dushore, and will take charge in the near future. There are now 30 looms in this mill and 20 more will be installed, making it a 50 loom plant. This will enable the company to handle orders at a better advantage than before.

Knife Swallower Dead.

Charles Henry, the young Polish miner of West Hazleton, who swallowed a large knife while giving an exhibition before a crowd of friends, and who had the article removed from his stomach at the State hospital, died very suddenly at that institution early Wednesday morning. The lining of the stomach had been cut by the knife, which was very sharp, and this caused his death.

Rather Unusual.

Last week the Advocate representative was stopped on the street and thanked by a person for a little item that appeared in a recent issue. For some reason his dinner relished better that day. It was only a little thing but was so unusual that it made a deep impression.—Wellsboro Advocate.

TAKEN TO POORHOUSE.

Once Prominent Owego Politician and Liquor Dealer Now County Charge.

"Pat" Maloney, for many years one of the best known citizens of Owego, and with as many friends as any, was taken to the Tioga county farm on Thursday of this week to end his days.

He has been living of late with his daughter, Mrs. Andrew Connel, at Apalachin, in very poor health, and his condition, mental and physical, had become such that it was impossible for his friends to suitably care for him.

Maloney was for 40 years one of the prominent liquor dealers of Tioga county and was deemed a wealthy man. He long conducted a bottling works near the Erie tracks, and also ran a saloon and a grocery there. Maloney is said to be the first man to sell lager beer in Owego. About 1868, when beer drinking first began in the country towns, Maloney secured the agency from the Bartholomew Brewing company at Rochester, and when his first shipment arrived, a sort of parade was had about the village, with the wagon bearing the beer decorated.

For many years Maloney was the undisputed Democratic boss of Tioga county, and a power in state politics. He has been state committeeman and delegate to National conventions. He has also traveled considerably and this included European trips.

Fol all that might be said against him, or his business, he was well known as a very generous, kindhearted man, with purse always open to his friends, and it was this, as much as failing business acumen, which led to the loss of his property and bankruptcy but a few years ago.

CIRCUS MISHAP.

Car Ran Away, Throwing Off Parade Wagon—Men Have Narrow Escape.

What might have been a serious accident, occurred in the Towanda yards of the Lehigh Thursday morning about 5:30 o'clock, shortly after the arrival of the John Sparks' show which exhibited here July 16, afternoon and evening. One of the flat cars carrying a number of parade wagons was cut loose from the train near the electric light station, and as the switches are on a grade at this point, the heavily laden car began to run very fast.

There were a number of coaches at the lower end of the switch, on which the runaway car was speeding, and a brakeman ran ahead throwing another switch, causing the runaway car to dash on to another track and into some freight cars.

The car crashed into the freight cars with great force, and there was what is called a "buckle," the colliding cars raising. The elevating of the circus car caused one of the big wagons to run off, but fortunately it was strong enough to stand the fall, and was but slightly damaged.

On the circus car and under the wagons, were a number of men sound asleep, and unaware of the danger they were in. They were lying in such positions that the heavy wagon in running off the car did not touch their bodies, otherwise they would have been either killed or badly injured.

Proved an Alibi.

Lehigh Detective Shaffer and a state trooper chased a man from Burlington to a point near Troy Tuesday afternoon, and when they captured him they thought they had the desperado who held up and robbed Lehigh Station Agent Stethers at the upper station early Monday morning. The prisoner took the officers to a farmer in Burlington township and there established such a strong alibi that they released him. He had been working on a farm until Tuesday noon when he quit and started to walk to Troy, stopping at Burlington where he fell under suspicion.
